BOMBS FLY AS 'REDS' SEEK NEW TRIAL

URGE COURT TO LISTEN TO NEW EVIDENCE

Seek Stay of Execution to Permit Time to Prepare Another Case

CLAIM PREJUDICE PROOF

First Visit to Superior Court Finds Judge Cold, Lawyer Says

Boston— (AP) —Counsel for Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti Saturday filed in the Norfolk-co superior court at Dedham a motion for a new trial for the two men and petitioned Governor Alvan T. Fuller for a stay of execution.

The petition for a new trial alleges prejudice on the part of Judge Webster Thayer, who presided and who refused previous motions for a new trial. It also asserts that new evidence has been found to the effect that holes in Sacco's cap which Judge Thayer had said were important to the case were made by Chief of Police Gallivan of Braintree. A third ground is the allegation that William H. Proctor, a state fire arms expert had changed his testimony.

The petition to the governor asks for a stay of execution "for a reasonable time" in order to permit counsel to prosecute motions for a new trial.

The petition to the governor set forth that the defense also had filed a petition for a habeas corpus in the Suffolk county superior court.

The petition for a writ of habeas corpus, which the petition to the governor said had been filed in the Suffolk superior court was actually filed in the office of the clerk of the Massachusetts supreme court Saturday afternoon.

John F. Cronin, clerk of the supreme court communicated with Justice Sanderson who fixed 10 o'clock Monday morning as the time for a hearing on the petition.

Arthur D. Hill, chief counsel for the defense, conferred with Justice Edward T. Broadhurst of the superior court at the courthouse in Boston Saturday and upon leaving said that Justice Broadhurst had refused to act on his request that a stay of execution be granted by that court and that some justice other than Judge Thayer be assigned to hear the motion for a new trial.

BAR DEMONSTRATIONS

Paris— (AP) —The French cabinet Saturday decided to forbid any public demonstrations in favor of Sacco and Vanzetti, including the labor, socialist and communist meeting and parade scheduled for Sunday.

STRIKE IN ARGENTINE

Buenos Aires, Argentina—(AP)— Violence marked the spread of the general strike in favor of Sacco and Vanzetti in the interior of Argentina, Friday night.

Despatches from Pergamino, Buenos Aires province, say a bomb was exploded in the Ford Automobile agency there, breaking some windows. Another bomb was placed on the railroad. Neither caused much damage.

Demonstrators roamed the streets, compelling the closing of business establishments and stoning those who refused. Among the places stoned was the Pergamino branch of the Banco Espanol.

CHICAGO BOAT WINS STURGEON BAY RACE

Sturgeon Bay —(AP)—With weather and sailing conditions ideal a large number of persons turned out Friday afternoon to see the Fame, a Chicago yacht owned by Weston and Dunlap, win the Sturgeon Bay chamber of commerce trophy in the cruising class at the second annual regatta staged by the local yacht club.

In the racing class the Siren, owned by Karas brothers of Chicago, won by seven seconds from the Fantome skippered by its owner, William Fairet, Chicago. The course was of triangular shape, two legs of three miles each and one of five miles. A good stiff southwest breeze blew over the the course at the mouth of the bay.

DEATH IN ELECTRIC CHAIR ENDS STRANGE NEW JERSEY CASE

Trenton, N. J. —(AP)— One of the strangest chapters in the criminal history of New Jersey—one of sombre death house nuptials and of a life lost by a semi-colon—is closed Saturday with the death of Salvatore Merra, executed for the murder of a street railway paymaster in Newark last year.

A bridegroom of three days, Merra was led the few step sfrom his cell to the electric chair Friday night by a small procession headed by the Rev. Father Cornelius J. McInerney, who officiated at the condemned man's marriage to Miss Jennie Tripodi of Newark. The priest had prevailed upon Merra to have the ceremony performed in order to legitimatize the couple's two-year-old son, Johnnie.

Merra was convicted with Salvatore Rannelli, the jury's verdict recommending life imprisonment for the latter. A comma instead of a semi colon divided the sentence and upon this Merra's counsel based the contention that mercy was intended for both men. The fight went through every court in the state, and finally to Justices Brandeis and Holmes of the United States supreme court but unfailingly meeting adverse decisions.

Merra died maintaining his innocence.

BOMB WRECKS HOME OF MAYOR OF BALTIMORE

Another Explosion Causes Damage to Presbyterian Church in Philadelphia

Baltimore, Md.—(AP)—The home of Mayor William F. Broening was damaged by a bomb at 6 o'clock Saturday morning which terrified his wife and two children, set fire to the rear and rocked the exclusive Forest Park section in the city's northwest quarter.

The mayor was not home, being enroute to St. Louis and the police were unable to assign any motive for anyone to mark him and his family for death.

George G. Henry, chief police inspector, refused to express an opinion as to the motive. "The police are trying to learn that now," he said. In other quarters, however, the outrage, taken in connection with the bomb explosions in New York and Philadelphia last night was laid to Sacco and Vanzetti sympathizers.

George G. Henry, chief inspector, ordered guards to protect all public buildings. He also directed that additonal policemen attend two public protest meetings to be held Saturday night by Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers.

The blast came after an exciting night for the wife, Mrs. J. Marie Broening and her daughter, Ethel, 19, and son, William, Jr., 21. At 2 o'clock they were awakened by the unusual barking of a neighbor's dog.

They listened and believed they heard someone prowling around the house. The son telephoned the police. Three officers said there was no one about after an inspection of the premises. They again retired.

At 6 o'clock the blast occurred. The three members of the family jumped up and met each other in the hall and ran terrior stricken to the front lawn.

The rear porch was in flames. The blast shook every house in the area, shattering the windows of many and within a few seconds the residents were running to the street. A neighbor sounded the fire alarm while another took the Broenings into his home.

The blaze was extinguished quickly but the firemen found the explosion had cracked the rear walls. The Police found particles of the bomb which they believed was equipped with a timing apparatus to discharge it.

CHURCH BOMBED

Philadelphia—(AP)—Emanuel Presbyterian church was badly damaged early Saturday by an explosion which the police attributed to a bomb hurled through a basement window. No one was hurt.

The Rev. Edward S. Bowman, pastor of the church, is out of the city. Neither members of his congregation nor his wife could offer an explanation of the explosion. Mrs. Bowman said her husband had never discussed radical activities from the pulpit.

The explosion tore a hole in the side of the building near the pavement and shattered its windows. Buildings for blocks around were shaken.

The explosion occurred shortly after midnight and there was no one in the church. An unexploded can of nitroglycerine was found in the debris in the basement and police expressed the belief that the alleged bomb throwers had been frightened away before they could set this off.

YOUTH RIDING BICYCLE KILLED BY MOTORIST

Stevens Point—(AP)—George Guth, Jr., 12, was struck by a hit and run driver on a local street Friday and died immediately after being taken to a hospital. The identity of the driver is unknown. Guth was riding a bicycle.

Wisconsin's Golf Champions

Smiles of victory illuminated the faces of J. A. (Buddy) Russell of Milwaukee, state amateur champion, and Bobby Testwuide, Sheboygan, state junior champion, as they posed for their pictures after the Wisconsin state tournament at Butte des Morts golf club Friday afternoon. Russell is standing back of the huge cup emblematic of the state championship and is holding the solid silver tea service which was his individual prize. He also received a gold medal. Testwuide received a gold medal emblematic of the junior championship. The senior champion is only 19 years of age and the junior is one year younger.

50 Dollar Day Merchants Offer Galaxy Of Bargains

Post-Crescent readers who are looking for ways to make their dollars travel the greatest possible distance when they are shopping will be doing themselves a vast injustice if they fail to study the advertisements which will appear in The Post-Crescent next Tuesday just before the opening of the late summer Dollar Day sales in Appleton stores. The sales will be held on Wednesday and Thursday, Aug. 10 and 11.

For instance one merchant is advertising a suit of clothes for $1 with another purchase of a suit. That means that if you buy one suit you can get another for $1. Pretty soft!

Then another merchant is offering full sized rugs for $4.95 and still another will give 16 cans of tomato soup, regular ten cent values, for $1. That's a good way to make the food dollar cover a lot of territory.

If you are in need of an ice box you will do well to find the advertisement which offers a good sized refrigerator for $11. And then there is a merchant who will give away a "Kiddo Kar" with every purchase of a $2.75 can of varnish.

There never were so many merchants cooperating in a bargain event before and there never were such startling bargains offered. Aug. 10 and 11 should be regular buying orgies for economically-minded shoppers.

Dollar Day stores, and there are more than fifty of them, will be identified by long yellow Dollar Day streamers. The shoppers will find them to the right of them, left of them, in front of them and back of them. Almost every store in the city will be offering exceptional values to stimulate buying. Dollar Days were instituted to give people big bargains and to enable merchants to clear their shelves for seasonal merchandise. Everybody benefits from them but the shopper gets by far the best of the deal.

5,000 BADGER CATTLE BREEDERS AT MEETING

Tomah —(AP)— Five thousand breeders from over the state accompanied by their families met at the Indian school here Saturday in the annual mid-summer convention of the Holstein-Friesian association of Wisconsin.

The lad was shot in the forehead in a hunting accident, and the bullet which passed between the lobes of the brain and lodged under the skull has not yet been removed.

THREE YOUTHS DROWN WHEN BOAT CAPSIZES

Fourth Member of Party Saves Self by Clambering on Overturned Craft

Lake Mills—(AP)—Three young men were drowned in Rock lake here about 10:30 Friday night when the outboard-motored boat in which they were taking a pleasure trip overturned. They were about half a mile out in the lake. All were from Jefferson. The drowned: Theodore Molensky, George Rindfleish, and Clarence Harder.

The fourth member of the party, Gerald Guttenberg, who managed to save himself by clambering on to the overturned boat was so confused with the suddenness of the accident that he could not explain what caused the boat to upset.

This morning none of the bodies of the three had been recovered, although several boat loads of men grappled for them throughout the night.

Although the company seldom lets boats out at such a late hour, the August Bartel Boat livery allowed the young men to take out the outboard-motor boat when they gave references and pleaded to be allowed to rent the craft to visit girl friends on the opposite shore.

Guttenberg said they went from here to Sandy Beach, and that the boat turned over after they were about half mile off that shore. He attempted to reach his companions from the boat after he had stretched himself across its hull, but they had started to swim for the shore, he said.

Their cries for help brought several boats from shore immediately but the three had drowned by the time aid arrived.

The court also imposed a fine of $250.

Before sentence was pronounced James Bingham, attorney for Shumaker said that a motion for arrest of judgment would be filed. The court set Aug. 18 for hearing of this motion. In the meantime Dr. Shumaker will be released on his own recognizance on a nominal bond of $1000.

BREAK GROUND FOR NEW MILITARY COUNTRY CLUB

Washington —(AP)— The old war song — "You're in the Army Now, You're Not Behind the Plow" was ignored at the ceremony of breaking the ground for the new army-navy and marine corps country club Friday.

A real army mule pulled a plow which was navigated by Major General Summerall, army chief of staff assisted by Rear Admiral Eberle, chief of naval operations and Major General LeJune, marine corps commandant. Elaborate ceremonies were staged. The club which will include a golf course, tennis courts, a polo field and a horse show ground, will be completed in a year.

CAL WON'T RUN IN '28 UNLESS HE IS DRAFTED

Leaders Believe Coolidge Awaits National Expression of Opinion

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Copyright 1927, by Post Pub. Co.

Washington—The next step in the Republican presidential situation is the organization of a nation-wide movement to draft Calvin Coolidge for renomination.

Leaders conversant with the intricacies of national policy are convinced that if Mr. Coolidge is really to be drafted there must be an organized expression to this effect and delegates must be committed at an early date before other candidates obtain their pledges.

As a matter of fact, even if Mr. Coolidge were not finally nominated, the strategy of those who line up delegates is usually carried forward in such a way as to enable them to control a convention choice. In other words many delegations are "uninstructed" so that the leaders may, at the psychological moment, throw their strength in the direction they choose. The Coolidge strength in the Republican party is at present the largest unit in it. If the announcement by Mr. Coolidge were to result in a disintegration of his strength, it would be regarded as fatal by leaders even though he himself were unwilling ultimately to make the race.

CAL'S PERSONAL OPINION

The conviction is growing that Mr. Coolidge by his announcement has merely expressed his personal preference and that it will never be charged that he himself favored a third term. The Republican party, on the other hand, can construe his length of service as a "second elective term" or third term as it pleases.

The most noticeable after effect of the Coolidge announcement is the way business men in the larger cities question Mr. Coolidge's sincerity at all but they would like very much to have uncertainty removed. Up until a few days ago, business had taken it for granted that Mr. Coolidge was going to be renominated and that if economic conditions were favorable he would gather a substantial electoral vote. Now businessmen are wondering just what the situation will be in 1928 and they are eager to have some clarification. For this reason steps are being taken to get Repub-

CAL WILL NOT CALL SECOND NAVAL MEET

Statement Is Further Proof Coolidge Will Not Be Candidate in 1928

Rapid City, S. D.—(AP)—Further evidence that President Coolidge plans to retire at the end of his present term comes in a statement from the summer White House that he will not call another conference on the limitation of naval armament because he believes he would be out of office before such a meeting could be convened, deliberate and any treaty coming out of it could be acted upon by the senate.

In letting it be known that the president had at present no plans for calling another naval armament conference, it was pointed out at the summer White House that such a matter must necessarily be regarded as an open question. It was said that some circumstance not now foreseen, could arise which might make another conference advisable, but that at the present no such circumstance exists.

In spite of the failure of the Geneva parley, Mr. Coolidge believes the cordial understanding and good relations between the United States, Great Britain and Japan will remain unimpaired. The mere fact that no agreement could be reached seems to him no reason to expect any disturbance of the peace of the world.

WORKMAN'S HEROISM PREVENTS DISASTER TO SHIP IN MIDOCEAN

New York—(AP)—Heroism of a junior engineer officer and four oilers on the North German Lloyd liner, Columbus, averted a dangerous accident in midocean, imperiling the 22,397 lives on board.

In some mysterious manner—possibly by striking a submerged derelict—the Columbus when 1,000 miles out lost a propellor. Released of the heavy load, the engine raced until it blew off a cylinder head.

Antone Weber, fourth engineer and four oilers crawled through the engine room, filled with steam and while the oilers held his legs, the engineer found and closed the steam valve.

The passengers took up a purse for the squad but Weber refused to take any reward, consenting merely to be trustee of a fund of $850, with which to buy watches for the oilers.

The Columbus arrived 36 hours overdue Friday night.

2 DRUNKEN DRIVERS GET INTO ACCIDENTS

William Bloomer and Albert Kielgas Lose Right to Drive for Six Months

Two drunken drivers involved in accidents Friday evening and shortly after midnight Saturday morning, paid fines of $50 and costs each Saturday morning when they pleaded guilty before Judge Theodore Berg. The drivers lost the right to drive automobiles in the state for six months.

36 DRUNKEN DRIVERS SINCE JAN. 1

William Bloomer, 732 W. College-ave, was thrown into the windshield of his car and received a four inch cut on his forehead, when his machine collided head on with an automobile owned by Martin Peters, 225 E. Juneau-st, Milwaukee. Bloomer was driving on Lawe-st between North and Pacific-sts at 12:45 Saturday morning when the accident occurred. He was arrested by Capt. Vaughn and Officer Deltgen and taken to a physician who took four stitches in the cut on his forehead.

The Peters car had a left front wheel and tire demolished and an axle and fender bent. The front end of the Bloomer car was completely wrecked.

Mrs. Anna Mason Goehler, 1422 E. Henry-st, was with Bloomer at the time of the accident.

Albert Kielgas, 1011 W. Elsie-st was arrested by Officer Deltgen at 9:30 Friday night when he drove his car into an automobile owned by James Smith, 245 Elm-st, while making a wide turn to the west on Packard-st. The accident occurred on Packard-st between Clark and Superior-sts. The Smith car was slightly damaged. The front fenders were bent and a tire was punctured on the Kielgas car.

TWO SUPERIOR SCHOOL BOARDS IN LEGAL FIGHT

Superior—(AP)—A restraining order preventing the so called old board of education from "pretending or attempting to act as the board of education" was granted Saturday morning by court Commissioner R. I. Tipton to attorneys for the new board of education. Under this order the old board is powerless until 2 o'clock in the afternoon of Aug. 8, when answer must be made in circuit court giving reason why a permanent injunction should not be granted annuling the power of the old board.

This latest phase of the school row here marks the first offensive step the new board has taken since it was elected. The old board, charged with causing the school strike here and otherwise disrupting Superior's school system, is scheduled to meet at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon. The new board will meet in the evening of the same day.

BLAME BLASTS IN NEW YORK ON RADICALS

Police Throw Guard Around Transportation Stations After Explosion

CITY IS IN UPROAR

Uncle Sam Sends His Agents to Look into Terrorism Reign

BULLETIN

New York — (AP) — Maurice L. Siegel, a 30 year old dentist was held without bail Saturday charged with suspicion of implication in the bombing of the 28th street station of the I. R. T., subway shortly before midnight.

Seigel, was described by police as a Russian, and had a picture of an explosion and a pamphlet entitled, The Life History of a Traitor, in his possession.

New York —(AP)— Every subway and elevated station in the city was under police guard Saturday in a determined attempt to prevent further activities of bombers — believed in some quarters to be Sacco Vanzetti sympathizers — who shortly before midnight wrecked two subway stations in the Madison Square district, terrrorizing thousands and injuring more than a score.

The federal government took a hand in the investigation Saturday morning, assigning department of justice agents to assist police of the bombs squad and bureau of combustibles in their search for clues.

The two bombs were exploded almost simultaneously in the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit station at Broadway and twenty-eighth-st, just above the Flat Iron building and the Interborough Rapid Transit station at Fourth-ave. and twenty-eighth-st, adjacent to the site of the old Madison Square Garden.

The bombs exploded with such force that walls of masonry were torn away, holes were blown upward through the sidewalk, and windows of surrounding buildings were shattered for four stories up from the street.

By fortunate coincidence a train was in neither station when the explosion occurred, although in one instance a train was approaching at the time and the brakes were applied so suddenly that dozens of passengers were thrown from their seats.

QUESTION SUSPECTS

Two men found in the east side subway of the Interborough company were taken into custody and released after being questioned. One of the men who gave his name as Stanley Zuke, 27, was found by a motorman in a track walker's dugout. The motorman stopped his train and took him to the platform, where he was joined by a companion, Chester Gablowsky, also 27. They said they were residents of Scranton, Pa. Zuke said his hat had blown off while waiting for a train and he had stepped on to the tracks to retrieve it.

The only clew in possession of investigators Saturday was a small iron box, smelling strongly of nitroglycerine, found in the wrecked B. M. T. station. The box, locked with a brass padlock, was taken to police headquarters for examination by experts.

When the bombs exploded underground, passengers and street crowds in the Madison Square district were thrown into confusion. The lights went out in the subway, making more difficult the task of police in learning whether anyone had been killed, and carrying the injured to ambulances.

Police Commissioner Warren Saturday cancelled all vacations of policemen and recalled to duty all those on vacation who were within reach, in an attempt to mobilize the city's 14,000 police. Uniformed men were placed on every station platform and plain clothes investigators were assigned to travel on the trains and circulate among crowds on the platforms.

A bomb which had failed to explode was found Saturday in front of the Montevideo branch of the National City bank of New York, at Montevideo, Uruguay.

Communists made a hostile demonstration before the house of the American consul at Lille, France.

At Cambridge, Mass., police were investigating the firing of shots at the East Cambridge district court house. The shots were fired during the night from a speeding automobile.

Boston like New York, was being guarded by extra police details. Patrolmen stood alert at vantage points

Former Countess Salm To Wed Argentine Man

New York—(AP)—A second international alliance will be cotracted by Mrs. Millicent Rogers, the former Countess Ludwig Salm von Hoogstraeten, whose first venture ended in Paris divorce courts.

Announcement of her engagement to marry Arthur Peralta Ramos, wealthy young Argentine, has been made at Southampton by her father, Colonel Henry H. Rogers, oil magnate. No date was set for the wedding but it was expected to take place in New York late in the fall.

Millicent Rogers is now with her mother and her young son in Paris where reports of the engagement were circulated shortly after her divorce, April 14, but subsequently were denied.

Two weeks ago when Mrs. Rogers arrived at Cherbourg after a visit to the United States, she was met at the pier by Ramos, who accompanied her to Paris. Ramos is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ramos, prominent in Buenos Aires society.

Mrs. Rogers first marriage when she eloped with Count Salm and was married at the municipal building in New York on January 5, 1924 caused a sensation.

Her parents refused to accept the Austrian nobleman as a son in law and the couple departed for Europe shortly after the ceremony. A son, Peter, was born September 27, 1924. They were divorced recently.

HEALTH BOARD OUTLINES WORK FOR CITY NURSE

Work a city nurse should do were discussed by members of the board of health at the regular monthly meeting at the city hall Saturday morning. The program was outlined at the last meeting and the items were considered in more detail at the August session. Since Appleton has no social worker, it was believed that the city nurse could do some of the work ordinarily done by the former.

The program outlined included these suggestions: obtain copies of all birth certificates; call on families applying to the poor department for aid; get information from doctors as to families needing advice; watch tuberculosis cases; preach vaccination for small pox and diphtheria; have school nurses turn over to her cases out of their jurisdiction; make a canvass to ascertain what need there is for a day nursery; advise women as the the best care for themselves to benefit children.

A resolution to this effect was introduced by Chauncey Yockey of Milwaukee and passed by the delegates at the meeting Friday afternoon and was the outgrowth of a statement issued by Grand Exalted Ruler John F. Malley, who suggested that a grand lodge endowment fund be created for the purpose of financing the various activities in the several states. This resolution also empowers the incoming president to appoint a commission of three to make an investigation into conditions of the state and to report at the next annual meeting with recommendations.

Nail Strewn Street Keeps Tire Repairmen On Jump

Fully 10 motorists paid the penalty of one man's carelessness Friday night after an unknown motorist driving a light truck had spread nails on College-ave west to Cherry-st and south on Cherry st for several blocks.

Garages and tire stations did a rushing business from 5 o'clock until midnight. Every repair shop in the city put on from one to five extra helpers when the rush of motorists with punctured tires began.

One man reported to police that he saw a light truck going west on College-ave from Appleton-st spilling nails from a box which had tipped over.

Shortly after 5 o'clock the calls to garages for help started. Pleasure vehicles were not the only cars that picked up the nails. Two trucks of the Mory Ice Cream company each had all four tires punctured, garage attendants later removing more than 30 of the nails from the eight tires. Many motorists reported two tires punctured and Motorcycle Officer Arndt also picked up two nails on W. College-ave.

As soon as the police department was notified, it in turn notified the street department and W. College-ave and S. Cherry-st were cleaned by the street sweeper.

No punctures were reported after that.

ican state conventions and local organizations to express themselves as soon as possible so that delegates may be chosen who will go to the next national convention and demand Mr. Coolidge's nomination.

WOULD RUN ANYWAY

This correspondent is convinced that Mr. Coolidge, while preferring to make no active campaign or in any other way to become involved in the presidential race, is nevertheless ready to accept the call of service if the nomination comes to him spontaneously and without contest.

Although the national convention is almost a year away, the getting of delegates usually proceeds in the 12 months preceding a convention. It will be noted that a poll of the national committeemen of the Republican party shows a large number who believe that Mr. Coolidge will accept the nomination. It is also being taken for granted that the president will not wait until the convention itself before indicating his willingness to accept. He will not, on the other hand, say anything at this time because he has nothing to accept—the movement to nominate him has yet to get under way and manifest itself. In all probability the New York state Republican convention will be the first to pass a resolution endorsing Mr. Coolidge for the presidential nomination and asking that he serve the party once more as its national standard bearer.

HOOVER, HUGHES OUT

Meanwhile men like Herbert Hoover and Charles Evans Hughes can be counted upon to refuse to permit their names to go on ballots in primaries or to take any other steps which would be construed as efforts to get into the race. Mr Hughes has definitely said he would not be a candidate and Mr. Hoover has just been quoted in dispatches as saying that he still believes that Mr. Coolidge should be nominated and reelected. The stage has been cleared for a real expression of opinion on the part of the leaders of the Republican party who are in a position to influence the choice of delegates in the several states.

UPPER FOX RIVER DEEPENED TO AID SHIP NAVIGATION

Dredging Completed as Far as Berlin; Finish at Portage in Fall

Revival of interest in navigation in Upper and Lower Fox river valley cities is seen in the action of the federal government to improve boating facilities. Dredging, which was begun the first week in June, has been completed on the Upper Fox as far as Berlin, according to A. F. Everett, in charge of the United States Navigation office here. It is hoped to finish the work at Portage next fall.

Two crews of eight men each are working daily on the dredge. Each shift is eight hours, and an average of from 1,200 to 1,500 cubic yards of earth is taken daily from the river bottom. The dredge, which was completed late last fall has an 80-foot boom and a scuttle of two cubic yards capacity. The machine is capable of handling about 2,000 cubic yards in the 16-hour day. The dredge is 100 feet long and 30 feet wide at its broadest point. It has a steel hull and is operated by steam.

FILL IN DEEP HOLES

Two dump scows will be part of the machinery when the dredge approaches Portage. These will be used in places to deposit earth in deep holes in the river.

The government specifications call for a channel of six feet in depth, but on its initial trip the dredge is removing earth only where the river is less than 4½ feet deep, and is occupied chiefly in removing sand bars projecting out into the river.

Portage interests, it is understood, have approached the federal government with an offer to establish a boat line on the Fox river, and urged the dredging to assure its navigability.

CONTRACT FOR TUG

A contract recently has been let by the government for a new steel tug to replace the tug Wolf. The new boat, which will be christened "Neenah" will be 60 feet long and will have a molded width of 20 feet. Its cost will be about $60,000. It will be equipped with two Diesel engines and modern conveniences to promote comfort and efficiency of the crew, including electric lights and shower baths. The contract was awarded a Sturgeon Bay firm. The tug Wolf is 89 feet long and 30 feet wide. It is now in service with the dredge.

The Menasha, built to replace the tug Fox now is on duty in the Fox river. It has a steel hull and is 104 feet in length, and is operated by steam. The tug also is equipped with modern devices.

Many small motorboats may return to the river it is perdicted now that the automobile has been firmly established as a means of transportation. Interest in pleasure boats lagged about fifteen years ago and turned to the automobile

CATLIN IS FOR NEW BUSINESS DISTRICT

Says Wisconsin-ave Residents Are Entiled to Have What They Want

People living in the seven blocks on W. Wisconsin-ave between N. Superior and N. Richmond-sts, should be given a business district, according to Mark Catlin, alderman from the First ward, and chairman of the ordinance committee to which the matter was referred by the common council. A petition was presented to the council asking that the present residential district there be converted into a local business section. The council referred the petition to the planning commission which recommended that the petition be refused. It then was referred to the ordinance committee.

"Five business places already are located in the seven blocks, so why shouldn't it be made a business district?" Alderman Catlin asked. "These people had businesses established there before the city was zoned, and they may maintain them until the buildings are no longer usable but may not do anything to prolong their life. Storekeepers cannot put a new front to their buildings because it is a residential not a local business district", he said. Mr. Catlin was of the opinion that the planning commission was not opposed to placing a business district there but did not want the recommendation to come from that body.

The committee was instructed to call a public hearing to learn the sentiment of W. Wisconsin-ave residents. This will be done soon. Mr. Catlin said.

DUMPING OF GARBAGE IN CITY DANGEROUS

Throwing of Debris in Ravines Will Result in Arrests

Warning was issued Friday by Theodore Sanders, deputy city health officer, against dumping garbage and other debris in ravines in Appleton. Court action will be taken against offenders who are arrested, he said.

The city health department has received numerous complaints from residents of the vicinity of the ravine near N. State-st, that garbage is being dumped near their homes. Although the city department covered the garbage with soil this week, more refuse is being dumped there by two or three persons. Mr. Sanders declared that a watch will be kept, and, if the offenders are discovered, warrants for their arrests will be issued. The health department will prefer charges in court against such persons.

"The stench of the garbage and the flies it attracts constitute a serious menace to the health of the neighborhood," said Mr. Sanders. "Several individuals have ignored the signs warning against dumping. We are going to keep watch for them, and will prosecute them in court if they are arrested."

Newspaper Advertising Praised As Sales Help

New York—Newspapers, both as a news medium and an advertising medium, have earned the praise of R. L. Whitman, advertising director of the J. C. Penny company. Whitman said recently that as a newspaper is primarily a news medium, advertising has no place in newspapers unless it presents an instructive and constructive news message.

"The American public is becoming more wisely critical if what it buys", Whitman said. "I believe that the time is coming when the confidence-building, service-rendering type of merchant will discontinue practices which are regarded as unethical.

The Penny company tells the people through advertisements that they do not need to respond today, tomorrow or any particular day, to our message, but that they can come at any time. Our merchandise and our prices will be the same next week or next month, as today.

"The J. C. Penny Company entertains no fear for the future of newspaper advertising believing that its principle is fundamentally sound and that this principle will be more and more safeguarded as time goes on. We can all be sure that the American newspaper is a vital and growing force in the retailing world."

CONSERVATIONISTS HAD BIG YEAR DURING 1927

Madison—(AP)—The state conservation commission, which is now making a checkup of the department's activities during the last year in view of the appointment of the new six-man commisson, reports "the best year the commisson has ever had.'

Among the revenues received by the department as a part of its conservation program is that amount which the state shares in the removal of rough fish, a total of $39,501 was received by the conservation commission. This is 20 per cent of the net proceeds earned by commercial fishermen, under state contracts, who have charge of this work.

The fishermen who are given permission to remove the rough fish, mainly carp and buffalo, seined up and caught 1,935,768 pounds of the destructive species.

BARBERS WILL SOON BECOME PERSONAGES

"Tony" and His Ilk Must Pass Examination, State Decrees

Madison—(AP)—"Tony" the barber will soon be a personage of history in Wisconsin by request of the state.

Amendments to the barber law made by the 1927 legislature and new rules governing barbering, made by the state board of health will allow those few foreigners, now being addressed as "Tony" by barbershop patrons, to remain in the "practice." But those licensed after June 30, 1927 must become naturalized American citizens.

Those graduating in the future from colleges where free shaves and tonsorial work are passed out and wishing to professionally stand beside chairs ranked in front of mirrors must have the equivalent of an eight grade education to be eligible for application for master barbers' licenses.

These barbers-to-be may, however, work as apprentices or journeymen without such qualifications.

Other provisions looking toward bigger and better barbering include the qualification that candidates for license must be examined in facial massage and scalp treatment in addition to hair cutting, shaving and honing. Some of the less modern barbers, unaware that the male is becoming as scrupulous with his face as the female, and who, consequently have not trained themselves in the administration of face beautifying and scalp revivifying aids, need not worry immediately about this section of the statutes, however, as it does not become effective until July 1, 1929.

Tourists visiting the stockade may stay in the cabins a night if they desire.

State Condemns Ragweed As Cause Of Hay Fever

Madison—With the annual exodus of people leaving for northern Wisconsin to escape the sufferings caused by hay fever, there comes a condemnation of the rag weed, which the educational committee of the State Medical Society brands as the most exclusive cause. The bulletin of the organization Thursday points out that only pollinated plants cause hay fever.

IT PAYS, IN PART

"We do not know definitely why one person develops hay fever and another does not. We do know, however, something about the mechanism of the disease. In many respects it is already allied with hives, asthma and certain cases of eczema. They all develop in individuals who have for some unknown reason become over-sensitive to certain substances which come into intimate contact with the body—either externally, through the degestive tract or through the respiratory system: In many instances the victim of hay fever can, by inquiry, find out that some of his ancestors either near or remote also suffered from hay fever or some of the kindred diseases. Of course, this does not help in relieving the symptoms but it does offer one explanation of the cause.

SOME PATIENTS CURED

"It is also true that many patients are permanently cured by skilled corrective operations on the nose and throat. This kind of treatment must always be considered, but it should be remembered that the structure of the nose is subject to wide variations which may be compatible with health, and that operative work should be considered only after a careful study of the local condition by a competent specialist. It is believed too that the removal of diseased teeth or diseased tonsils may sometimes bring about relief or cure. The presence of such infection certainly lowers one's resistance, and it is only logical to assume that anything which constantly impairs normal resistance may bear a causative relationship to hay fever. as to the neurotic individual, it might be said that we often observe hay fever in those who have a neurotic temperament, but to cure a "temperament" is a bigger problem than to cure hay fever.

FIND SOME RELIEF

"The treatment of hay fever by desensitization through hypodermic injections of pollen extracts has become very popular during recent years. To carry out this treatment the patient should consult his physician about two months before the expected onset of symptoms. He is tested by the 'skin scratch method' with various pollens to determine the plant to which he is susceptible. The physician then orders the appropriate pollen or pollens and the injections are given on a stated schedule—usually every third, fourth or fifth day. It is generally believed that this treatment carefully carried out will give marked or complete relief in about 50 per cent of the patients so treated. It is certainly worth trying, at least for one or two seasons. Relief by this treatment may not be permanent: it must be repeated from year to year.

"Last of all, one can always get relief if one can take a vacation and go to the northern part of the state. As a rule any location within 40 or 50 miles of Lake Superior, will prove to be entirely satisfactory. Of course, the virtue in this plan is merely that of taking the patient away from his disease, since the offending pollens are not found in the air in this locality."

U. S. WEATHER BUREAU NOTES TWO EARTHQUAKES

Chicago—(AP)—The United States weather bureau seismograph at the University of Chicago Saturday revealed records of two earthquakes registered late Friday.

The first was rather severe and lasted from 3.26 p. m. central standard time to 5:50 p. m. with its maximum intensity at 3:51 p. m. It was 6,000 miles away.

Thesecond lasted from 6:22 p. m. to 7:40 p. m. with its maximum at 6:40 p. m. It was lighter and nearer, being 3,200 miles away.

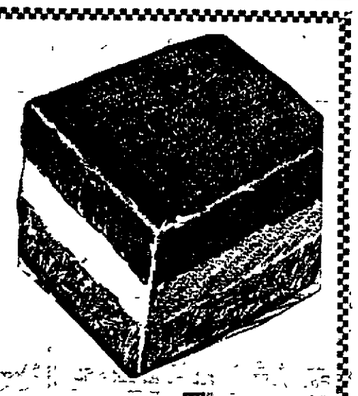

LUMBER MILLS REPORT INCREASE IN BUSINESS

New York — (AP)—Reports received by the National Lumber Manufacturers' association from 248 softwood and 132 hardwood lumber mills indicate a slight expansion of business last week as compared with the preceding week.

A nominal decrease in new softwood business is offset by the fact that fewer mills reported last week, while 16 fewer hardwood mills reported a gain of about 20 per cent in new business.

Softwood unfilled orders for the week totalled $223,513,232 against $227,513,391 for the corresponding week of 1926 while hardwood orders totalled $17,584,000 against $16,606,257 for the same week last year.

NEWS DISSEMINATION PROBLEMS DISCUSSED

Press Conference at Geneva to Decide if All News Is Public Property

New York—International discussion of armament limitation soon has given way to international debate on the dissemination of news at Geneva.

Foremost American editors and publishers have sailed from New York to participate. They will open the International Press Conference at Geneva on August 24. The conference is to be held under League of Nations auspices.

The vital issue to be disposed of is whether the "open door" policy is to prevail in the handling of important government news—whether its collection, transmission, and distribution to newspapers for publication is to be "controlled" or unrestricted.

Two conflicting opinions are expected to develop, one that governmental news is common property and should be available to all publication agencies on a basis of equality; the other that "official" agencies and propaganda bureaus are entitled to special privileges.

NO ALLIANCES

Independent agencies, which accept no subsidies and have no alliances with subsidized government bureaus comprise the "open door" element.

The United Press, Associated Press, Scripps-Howard Newspapers, International News Service, and the New York Times will have representatives at the conference. In all, nearly two-score delegates will be on hand.

An early test of strength of the opposing sides is expected over a proposal by the "independents" that sessions of the conference be open to the public. Subsidized agencies keep the discussions secret.

Two conferences preliminary to the one about to open already have been held. The first was participated in a year ago by representatives of telegraphic news agencies. The second was a meeting of "official" or "allied" agencies at Warsaw. The first was presided over by Roy W. Howard, representing the United Press; the second, which was secret, by M. Grzybowski, who heads the propaganda department of the government of Poland.

UNHAMPERED NEWS

At the first conference, importance of free and unhampered exchange of news to international peace was stressed. The conference resolved:

"That all governments of the world be requested to grant and to assure absolute equality of treatment to all telegraphic news agencies whether official or independent:

"1. In the matter of distribution of all official news;

"2. In the matter of priority or order of transmission of their telegrams;

"3. In the matter of telegraph, telephone, radio, and cable rates;

"4. In the matter of treatment by the censor, whenever the internal or international situation of any country may render the establishment of press dispatches necessary."

Ratification of this resolution in effect will be the big question when the third conference of the series takes place.

TRIPP FAVORS DAM ON WOLF RIVER AS WAY TO END FLOOD

Outlines Project for Stream as Presented to Federal Board

Building of a dam on the Wolf River above Shawano outside of the Menominee Indian reservation has received the whole-hearted approval of Alan H. Tripp, president of the Association for the Relief of High Water. He believes that the dam will reduce to a large extent the flood peak at New London.

Tripp hopes to get another dam built at Leeman above Shiocton. Power companies are now investigating the Leeman site and according to the survey made last year by federal engineers, state engineers and engineers for the association, the building of this dam at Shawano and the one at Leeman will reduce the flood peak at New London over 20 inches. This information was presented to the federal power board by Tripp and no doubt was the real reason this permit was issued as a flood control matter.

KEY TO SITUATION

As regards the proposed dams on the Indian reservation, Mr. Tripp believes that this is the key to the entire flood situation of the Fox River valley. The permit asked for by the Wisconsin Power company is not one asking to build dams at this time, but is one asking for leave to go into the reservation to take levels and make a survey to find out what dams and reservoirs can be built.

From a study of the survey made years ago by the Indians, Tripp states it is not necessary to destroy Smoky Falls; that the beautiful falls can be left untouched. One dam would be built at Keshena which would back the water up to a short distance below Smoky Falls. Tourists could drive to Keshena, get into a steamer and have a delightful boat ride to Smoky Falls. This trip alone would be equal to the Dells trip and bring thousands of dollars annually into the pockets of Indians, and the lake would provide a beautiful scenic body of water to fish in.

"Propaganda against this project it founded on words and not on facts," Tripp states. "The public has had the wool pulled over its eyes and the real truth in the end will win out.

"If this proposition goes through, all will be benefitted—Indians, fish, game, muskrats, wild ducks, farmers, and our Wolf River handled like our Wisconsin River is handled by a system of reservoirs.

"The only interest who might consider themselves hurt is the water power interests of the lower Fox River, as the control of this water will be under the Federal Power Board. The water power interests of the lower Fox will really be benefitted instead of losing as they will get more power. The water we now sluice to keep our lake down to the 15 inch limit will be to some extent conserved and used for power instead of wasted as it is now. The only thing the water power interests of the lower Fox use is control—and after having control for over 50 years, will they give this control up?

"All these facts have been presented by me to the Federal Power Board and I expect the project will go through as a flood control proposition in spite of all this false propaganda. Sifted down, it is evident that no one is going to be injured by the building of these reservoirs; all will be benefitted."

GRAND PRIZE OFFERED FOR BEST PARIS GOWN

Paris —(AP)— The well-known "Parisienne" now has an annual 50,000-franc Grand Prize of Elegance. Leonard Rosenthal, the pearl merchant, put up the money, with the understanding that the fifty 1,000-franc notes would be given by the winner to fifty little, hard-working midinettes in the dressmaking shop that made the prize gown.

"Other countries, larger than ours, have massiveness and strength," says the announcement of the prize. "They rae the roots of the world. France is the flower," it goes on modesty. "Her mission is to produce, in every line, the rare and the exquisite whether an ocean liner, a womans dress, a rose or a perfume. The Parisienne is the supreme expression of this hothouse culture which will not flourish alone. It must be helped a little."

DRAGON FLIES, MAYBE

New York—A South American whose name space does not permit printing in full but the first part of which is Dr Ricardo Fernandez y Grouterez sailed for Africa recently from New York taking with him a box of South American flies with which he hopes to exterminate the tsetse fly, deadly sourge of the veldte. When one is informed that these winged insects, for which no name has yet been found, show jaguars in the Amazon jungles such a nasty time that Mr. Jaguar prefers suicide in the river to their attacks, a good idea of what is in store for the tsetse fly is obtained.

Babson Predicts Chain Of Big Summer Resorts

Yellowstone Park—Roger W. Babson, on his way to the Pacific coast and Rocky mountains, stopped here recently and was greatly impressed by the size and development of the summer resort industry.

The direct relation between relaxation found in resorts and its beneficial effect upon business men was pointed out by Babson who said, in part:

"Business men are learning that good health is almost an absolute necessity for business success. They see men winning in competitive business largely because of their physical ability to stand the pressure; while men far more brilliant fall by the wayside because of their inability to stand the strain. Furthermore, physicians and physchologists are agreed that there is a very direct relationship between good health and initiative, ambition, and enterprise. Of course, there have been many instances where men with weak constitutions have accomplished much in the business world; but statistics would show that most captains of industry owe their success largely to their physical endurance; while poor health is one of the two chief causes of business failures. Hence it will be seen that a real economic urge underlies the development of such sports as golf, tennis, horseback riding and the like; while most of the resorts both winter and summer are justified from an economic standpoint. This is even truer today than ever before as automobiles, servants, apartment houses and other modern comforts, and luxuries have taken away the few homely methods for exercise and recreation which business men had when cultivating backyard gardens or mowing their own lawns.

NEED TO THINK

"The great need of American business today is that its leaders take more time to think and meditate. As every wise captain stops periodically to take his bearings, so the business man should do likewise. In the days of our fathers daily family prayers, Sabbath observance and the old-fashioned camp meeting week served this function. With these important American institutions being neglected it is absolutely essential that something be developed to, in part at least, take their place. Of course, the fashionable Winter or Summer resort (where men do only front porch fishing and women are content to play piazza bridge) are not performing much of an economic function except as they help mothers marry off their daughters. Thus, however, is the real reason why so few of the fashionable winter and summer hotels, whether in Maine or Florida, are today paying investments for their stockholders. Although these once popular hotels are becoming less and less profitable, yet there are growing up in all sections of the country hundreds of camps for both adults and children which are strengthening their patrons spiritually, intellectually and physically. No complete statistics are available on the enormity of this new industry: but it is both directly and indirectly becoming a real factor in American business.

"The older centers of outdoor interest such as Yellowstone Park (where I am today,) the Yosemite Valley, the Grand Canyon, certain Colorado points, Niagara Falls, Saratoga Springs, Atlantic City and similar places have existed for years and have done most of the resort business. Today, however, these well known places do only about five per cent of the business. Most of the resort business is done by smart hotels, boarding houses, and camps. Every railroad in the country today is featuring in its folders this resort business. Those resorts, growing with the greatest rapidity, are known as the Bungalow Camps consisting of a central Club House with living and dining room, surrounded by cabins. Each cabin has two beds, a stove, washstand and table and more modern ones have at least running water and often private toilets.

Throughout New England these camps are rapidly getting the business away from the hotels; while in the West they are known as 'Dude Ranches' and in the South as places to fish. Their growth is so rapid that I readily foresee the time when they will be linked up in large numbers under central management as are the chain stores. The day will soon be at hand when the stocks of these organizations will be listed on the New York Stock Exchange as are the stocks today of movie theatre companies, chain restaurants, and other recreational enterprises which did not exist a generation ago.

In this connection let me say that the United States now has nineteen National Parks of which those mentioned above are but three. On each of these the Government issues a very complete booklet with maps, hotel and camp rates, and points of interest.

ECONOMIC VALUE OF BEAUTY

"California, Colorado and in fact nearly all the forty-eight states have much to learn from Caanda in connection with preserving natural beauty by eliminating forest fires and commercial desecration. Moreover Canada is starting a very active campaign against advertising signs on any highway except within city and town limits. The Province of Alberta is setting a standard in this connection which, if followed in the United States would increase property value, reduce automobile accidents, and in the end even benefit the General Outdoor Advertising Company and its associated concerns. Unless the United States wakes up as to the economic value of beauty, Canada, twenty-five years hence, will have the bulk of the great resort business of America.

TWO DARING FORECASTS

"Those who have not traveled extensively fail to realize the great factor which the motor coach and private automobile have become in the resort industry. The long haul railroads have a good future; but I cannot get bullish over the short haul roads except for terminal facilities. Moreover, the street railway is doomed. Future interurban transportation will be on rubber. Either a rubber wheel will be invented to operate on highways in the cities and rails between two cities; or else the present railway rights-of-way will be concreted upon which motor coaches will operate. Motor coaches and airplanes (after the helicopter or something equivalent is perfected) will be the chief methods of resort travel; but these motor coaches will be taken off the highways except within the cities. One thing more—horseback riding and hiking are returning. As up-to-date cities and towns have provided parks and are now locating airplane landing fields, so they will soon begin to lay out trails for horseback riding and hiking. Riding and walking are coming back. The automobile has temporarily killed both; but they soon will return. Trails, like railroad rights-of-way, will some day be operated between all cities connecting one resort with another so that a person can ride or walk without going on an automobile road."

The only thing in the four Gospels to which the Hindus take exception is the killing of the fatted calf — and that because they regard the cow as sacred.

An old English couple dwell undisturbed in a completely furnished house without paying rent because 20 years ago the owner was frightened from it by the appearance of a ghost.

Among the oldest families of England are twety who have direct descent from the Norman conquest in 1066. Thirty-five families have ancestors who came over with William the Conqueror.

BETTER BALANCE NOTED IN LUMBER INDUSTRIES

In its weekly market review, the American Lumberman, Chicago says:

In the lumber industry there is being achieved a better balance of supply and demand. For several months, some of the larger groups of softwood mills have been curtailing production, but unfavorable weather in consuming territory has resulted in sale falling below expectations. Prices have therefore been softening during the last few weeks. Figures at which lumber has sold have involved a loss to the mills and a number of southern pine manufacturers have recently followed the example of the western producers in temporarily shutting down their plants.

As softwood sales for the first 29 weeks of this year have exceeded the cut by five per cent, there is no serious accumulation of unsold lumber at the mills.

Lumbermen generally are optimistic as regards fall trade. Good crops are being harvested in the middle West and South and also in the Far West and country and small town retail yards are sending in an increasing volume of inquiry. Stocks of the retailers as a rule are low.

The more important groups of hardwood consumers have not yet begun to purchase their fall needs. Flooring and millwork plants are perhaps the best buyers at present. The automobile industry is taking fair amounts, as new models are being put on the market. Most recent buyers of hardwoods have sought bargains, but the mills realize that available stocks are small and will be needed before the end of the season, so they are not going far in making concessions.

CHILEAN MINISTERS PUT BAN ON "MANANA" SPIRIT

Santiago, Chile—(AP)—Chile's foreign minister, Conrado Rois Gallardo, will tolerate no spirit of "Manana" in the functioning of his department.

Senor Gallardo has given orders to his staff that hereafter use of the word "manana" will be forbidden in all dealings connected with the ministry, and must be substituted by the word "hoy," meaning today.

The minister points out that frequent employment of the word "manana" in Latin American countries has led to ridicule in the United States and England, where it is taken as a symbol of aLtin American indolence.

THE CHALLENGE TO THE CHURCH

A conference is in progress at Lausanne, Switzerland, in an effort to find a basis for unification of the christian church or of some substantial part of it. In addressing the conference Bishop Charles H. Brent of Buffalo declared that division as it exists today is suicidal and has resulted in the United States in less than fifty per cent of the population even professing christianity. It is imperative, he added, that "christendom set its house in order by obtaining unity of the various christian sects before it further infects the eastern world with sectarianism."

We think the bishop has hit the religious problem of the twentieth century squarely on the head. The day has long passed for the segregation of professed christians into innumerable camps and groups, many hostile to the others, and all resting on creeds and formulas representing a distinction without spiritual difference. Obviously these conditions and demarcations are contrary to the true word of God as revealed in the bible. No real basis can exist for them. There is room for only one Protestant church, just as there is room for only one Catholic church. As constituted up to this time the Protestant church is a house divided against itself. It is guilty of inconsistencies and dogma that offend the intelligence of fair and clear thinking men. Its controversies over creeds and forms are childish and petty. They have no place in modern civilization. Many denominations have been more concerned with the preservation of the arbitrary interpretation of the scriptures than with the world's social and spiritual progress. Doubtless this explains why membership has fallen off and why there is so much irreverance and so much indifference toward the church.

The supreme challenge to the Protestant church is, as Bishop Brent has voiced it, to get together, to wipe out sectarianism and unite itself under one roof. One inestimable benefit of unification would be the supplanting of a number of weak community denominations with one strong one and the elevation of the ministry to a new level of ability and service.

A MORAL OBLIGATION

Governor Zimmerman takes occasion to severely criticize the legislature for extravagance. We think the indictment rests on good ground. The legislature has not hesitated to authorize appropriations without regard to the condition of the state treasury or tax relief. The governor charges that its course has been influenced by its hostility to him personally and by a desire to so load his administration down with expense as to embarrass it financially and put it in bad repute with the people. Certainly the accusation is given color by the fact that the legislature did not raise a finger toward the budgeting of state expenditures, public economy and tax relief. We shall not criticize the governor if by vetoing some of the appropriations which he considers excessive he forces the legislature to re-convene or calls an extra session.

We cannot, however, indorse his veto of the bill which provided for a refund of inheritance taxes paid to the state under the provision of the Wisconsin inheritance tax law, declared unconstitutional by the United States supreme court. The law was a plain challenge of the good faith and rights of the individual to dispose of property by gift. The governor defends his veto on the ground that legal proceedings to contest inheritance taxes under this unconstitutional law were available at the time they were levied and after the statutory period of limitation has run, there legitimately is no relief.

It may be that legally estates are without relief but not morally. A tax has been collected to which the state has no ethical right. It is its duty to return an unlawfully collected tax. Not to do so is equivalent to moral dishonesty. The great majority of the citizens accept laws passed by the state as constitutional and conform to them. If a test case is made it is understood that it is in behalf of all possible claimants. The bill to refund inheritance taxes unjustly and unlawfully collected should have been signed, regardless of the condition of the treasury or of its effect upon taxes. It is one of the obligations that political expediency or technical explanation cannot cancel.

COOLIDGE ISN'T OUT OF IT

President Coolidge's unexpected announcement of his political plans came like a thunderbolt. It knocked the stock market galley west and the schemes of party leaders into a cocked hat. It took the wind out of the sails of his straggling competitors all save Senator Borah, who nobly rose to the occasion by accepting the statement at face value and congratulating the president on making his decision to retire final. The Idaho senator, who has about as much chance for the Republican nomination as Governor Smith has for the Democratic, was evidently fathering his thoughts with his wishes.

All the comment of politicians may be set down as of little value. Each expression is from the standpoint of what the declarer would or would not like to see happen. Most of the interpretations, therefore, are biased, and the public is left to form its own conclusions, which it would better do from a candid study of Mr. Coolidge and his record. We prefer to believe that he is not running away from the presidency, that he is not frightened by the attitude of the Mid-west and that he is unafraid of results in 1928. He is not going to enter into a scramble for another term, and for that he is to be commended. He has been subjected to a deal of criticism, and while every occupant of the White house must expect this, it has been of a nature that challenged his good faith and his regard for the Washington no-third-term precedent.

Without the announcement Mr. Coolidge would have been nominated and elected. That was at least a ten to one shot. It is a moral certainty that any candidate the Republicans name will be elected. The only doubt raised by Mr. Coolidge's announcement is whether the Republican convention will nominate him despite the statement that he does not "choose to run for president in 1928." One guess is as good as another as to what the convention will do. Ours is that if the record at the next session of congress is favorable and the Coolidge leadership is conspicuous, he will be renominated regardless of all obstructive use that may be made of a sentence that promises to go down in history as a classic presidential utterance.

MORE HOKUM TO EXPOSE

In the general mania for reformers to attempt reforming, it is surprising that no righteous group of yogi and swami chasers has ever gone after the ladies and gents of the fortune telling fraternity. They flourish unlicensed all over the land, fleecing innocent millions of their hard earned simoleons. Fortune telling with cards, with crystals, with wishbones, by reading the stars, reading the palms, and reading the bumps on the head goes on unchecked through man's—and woman's—insatiable sucker complex.

If we persist in superstition, it seems but reasonable that the state should profit as well as the quack readers of the future. A good stiff license fee act would do the trick nicely, and in short order should drive all the experts in futurity to the tall timbers. Of all the malignant parasites on the human race, the genus fortune teller is the most virulent.

Whose teeth like pearls, whose lips like cherries show,
And fawn-like eyes still tremble as they glow.

PALE GUMS AND POOR TEETH

Miss Marjory R——— asks a pertinent question:

"I am 16 years old and so far have very good teeth and would like to keep them good. I have my teeth examined twice a year, but my gums are a pale red. Is that a symptom of any disease? I use ——— for mouth wash. Is that all right? Kindly tell me what is the best way to care for my teeth."

I am not in touch with the latest magazine lore and it may be that Miss Marjory has stumbled upon some new disease in her favorite magazine, the telltale sign being pale red gums. If that is the case I can only assure her that I haven't learned about the new disease yet, and to my dull consciousness pale red gums are normal.

However, if an individual is very anemic—that is, if the blood is below standard in red cell quota or hemoglobin (coloring matter) percentage or both, the gums usually appear pale, as do the lips.

If there is any association or connection between paleness of the gums and the condition of the teeth it is rather an indirect one. The dentists assure me that insufficient mastification of natural foods is attended with pale gums. Well, if that is the case, then the prevention and remedy should be obvious enough—one must see to it that a reasonable amount of fresh raw vegetables and fruits are included in the daily rations, and one must chew them vigorously and thoroughly, for the benefit of the teeth and gums as well as the general health.

I think the old time prejudice of doctors, dentists and folks against candy and sweets in the diet of the child was largely based upon the unconsidered fact that the child who had much candy and other sweets did not do much masticating and so the teeth suffered, from lack of exercise of the muscles of mastication as well as lack of the mineral elements and vitamins that we now believe so essential for the development of sound teeth.

Miss Marjory asks about a mouth wash. The boric acid solution she uses is all right, though I prefer to make my own boric acid solution and omit the pretty tints and tastes—a teaspoonful of boric acid in the pint of boiled water. This, I think, is as efficient as any antiseptic mouth wash or gargle can be.

The practice of having the teeth inspected, and if necessary treated, twice a year, is in my judgment the best plan of all for the conservation of the teeth. In spite of any care one may take of one's teeth a certain amount of tartar accumulation is inevitable, and this can be removed only by the dentist.

Not a word has been said about brushing the teeth or using any kind of soap, plain or fancy.

Not a word need be said about that. It is of no importance, in the conservation of the teeth. If one likes to use a tooth brush and some toilet soap or other dentrifice, there is no harm in it, as a rule. The actual cleaning of the teeth, however, is most effectively accomplished in the mastication of fruits and vegetables, except tartar deposits or stains, which require the skill of the dentist.

We believe small daily doses of cod liver oil for the expectant mother and for the young infant supply a vitamin which aids in the development of good teeth.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Hygiene

Please send your pamphlet on feminine hygiene, particularly the use of douches. (M. F.)

Answer—Hygiene is not feminine, nor masculine. I have no such pamphlet. Hygiene does not concern the use of douches. That is a question of pathology or treatment of disease.

Castor Oil and Periodic Sick Headache

Will you please give me the directions for the use of castor oil for migraine? (Mrs. L. O. S.)

Answer—Minute doses of castor oil should be taken twice daily for a period of several months. As much as one can take without producing laxity of the bowel—perhaps three to five drops of the oil twice daily, and it may be taken in capsuls if desired. Omit the dose or diminish whenever the cathartic effect is noticed, for that is not the purpose of the treatment. I do not know how much good this may do—some readers have reported extraordinary benefit.

Books for TB Patients

My daughter, aged 22, is in ——— sanitarium. Please tell me of some good books which would be helpful to her. (M. B. L.)

Answer—Dr. Lawrason Brown's "Rules for Recovery" (Lea & Febiger) or Dr. Charles E. Atkinson's "Lessons on TB and Consumption" (Funk Wagnalls company) or Drs. Gerald Webb and Charles T. Ryder's "Recovery Record" (Paul B. Hoeber Inc.) are excellent.

The Three Musketeers

HASKIN WRITES TODAY
ON—

LOWER POSTAGE ON BOOKS

Washington, D. C. — Lower postage rates on books are being sought by publishers, booksellers, and authors. That Congress, at its approaching session, will enact a law to that end is generally anticipated. There are absurdities in existing postal rates that must be corrected once Congress has given them its attention.

For example, it costs almost twice as much to mail a two-pound book from New York to San Francisco as it does to mail the same book from New York to Japan. To be explicit, the New York-San Francisco postage on such a book is 26 cents, whereas the New York-Japan rate is 16 cents.

It is about twice as far from San Francisco to Japan as it is from New York to San Francisco. The books for Japan must in the initial stage of its journey incur every handling cost that it would if it were consigned to the California city. Why, then, should it be carried the far greater distance at a much lower rate?

The answer, of course, is that the New York-Japan rate is a matter of international agreement. Under the International Postal Union Convention preferential rates upon printed matter have long been established in recognition of the educational value of distributing printed matter by mail at a low cost. This Convention, prescribing a rate of one cent for every two ounces, regardless of distance, is in effect between practically all civilized countries of the world, including the United States. But when it comes to domestic postage rates, this country lags far behind in the matter of encouraging the mail distribution of books.

Even the express companies, which are in no sense philanthropic concerns, but, on the contrary, are conducted primarily for the purpose of making money, will carry and deliver more cheaply than will the Government through its postal service to points nian dbeyond the fourth Parcel post zone.

COMPARISON WITH EXPRESS RATES

The American Railway Express Company, it is stated by the National Association of Book Publishers, is advertising extensively that it is interested in helping to educate the people through the reading of books. Therefore it has fixed and is maintaining a special flat rate on books of only 1-2 cent an ounce, with a minimum charge of 15 cents a package, from any railroad point in the country to any other railroad point, regardless of distance.

Thus a two-pound book can be sent by express from New York to San Francisco for 16 cents, whereas the postage rate would be 26 cents.

Moreover, the express charge includes insurance up to ten dollars per package and free call and delivery service, within published limits, in practically every city and most of the towns in the United States. Adding the postal service fee of eight cents to the regular parcel post rates in order to include insurance up to ten dollars per package, the difference between mail and express costs of distributing books becomes even more striking. The rate from New York to San Francisco by mail is 34 cents, while express rate is less than half that, or 16 cents.

Within the fourth postal zone the mail rate on a two-pound book is 21 cents and the express rate 16 cents. In the fifth zone the mail rate moves up to 24 cents, in the sixth to 27 cents, in the seventh to 31 cents and in the eighth to 34 cents, while the express rate remains constant at 16 cents.

Off hand, the answer to publishers and others interested would seem to be, "Use the express service." The retort to that answer, which is equally obvious, is that they do use the express service whenever they can save money by so doing. They would prefer, however, to use the postal service, other things being equal.

Furthermore, the postal rates discriminate against books and in favor of magazines and newspapers, and the book publishers can not see why that should be.

ANOTHER COMPARISON DETAILED

While books have to bear the parcel rates, second class reading matter — magazines and newspapers — is transmitted through the mails to any part of the United States at a flat rate of 1½ cents per pound. On the portion of second class publications devoted to advertisements the rates per pound or fraction thereof are, for the first and second zones, 2 cents; third zone, 3 cents; fourth, fifth and sixth zones, 6 cents; seventh and eighth zones, 9 cents.

Thus magazines and newspapers consisting exclusively of reading matter may be mailed anywhere in the United States at a cost of 3 cents for a two-pound package. A book of similar weight would cost 8 cents in the 1st and 2nd zones; 10 cents in the third; 13 cents in the fourth; 16 cents in the fifth; 19 cents in the sixth; 23 cents in the seventh, and 26 cents in the eighth.

A magazine or newspaper consisting one half of reading matter and one-half of advertising costs, for a two-pound package, 3½ cents for the first and second zones; 4½ cents for the third; 7½ cents for the fourth, fifth, and sixth zones; and 10½ cents for the seventh and eighth zones.

At their convention this year the American Booksellers Association adopted resolutions urging the next Congress to provide a separate classification of mail matter for books and lower postal rates therefore, so that books consisting wholly of reading matter and containing no advertisements other than incidental announcements of books shall pay a flat rate of 2½ cents per pound or fraction thereof, with a minium charge of 3 cents for each parcel and subject to the same maximum weights per parcel now prescribed for mail matter of the fourth class.

The National Association of Book Publishers says it is convinced that some such legislation as this is necessary to insure a reasonable and proper distribution of books. In urging the enactment of legislation to provide for a separate classification of mail matter for this important necessity it feels that it is rendering a public service of the first magnitude. Lower postal rates, by creating an increased demand for books, would of course benefit the publishers, booksellers, and authors, but the benefit to the trade would not be comparable to that accuring to the public. It is obvious that the public good that would result from this stimulus to the advancement of education and culture is incalable the Association states.

The American Library Association has estimated that 44 per cent of the total population of the United States, or more than 50 million persons, are without access to public libraries. Probably an even greater number are without direct access to bookstores. Hence the mails afford the only practicable means for the wide distribution of books.

HOT WEATHER AND HEALTH

HOARSENESS IS DANGER SIGNAL REQUIRING PROMPT ATTENTION

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

The average person whose voice suddenly becomes hoarse is likely to attribute the condition to overuse, or to say that it is just a slight cold and will disappear.

Hoarseness is such a common affliction that it seldom receives the attention that it should. On the other hand, loss of the voice or hoarseness may sometimes be the first and only danger signal of some serious disease in which prompt treatment may save the patient untold suffering or even early death.

Dr. George D. Wolf has recently considered some important aspects of this subject. In children the sudden appearance of hoarseness may be due to the fact that some foreign material usually a coin or some other metal substance, has been swallowed or inhaled into the larynx. If it is found that a child has suddenly begun to choke and turn blue and that these symptoms have cleared up at once and been followed by hoarseness, the swallowing or inhaling of a foreign body should be suspected. Fortunately, the presence of such a substance can be promptly determined by the use of the X-ray.

In certain diseases affecting the throat, such as diphtheria or croup, hoarseness is a prominent symptom. In grown-up persons, the sudden onset of hoarseness is usually due to some inflammation of the larynx. If there is shortness of breath accompanying this, the physician is likely to think of an abcess as the primary cause.

Not infrequently, the onset of hoarseness which gradually increases, is due to tuberculosis of the throat or secondary to tuberculosis in the lungs. In such cases, it is absolutely necessary to have at once an inspection of the throat by a competent physician.

Persons who smoke a great deal, who use the voice excessively, or who work in occupations that are dusty or smoky, suffer frequently with hoarseness. Obviously the first step in the treatment of the condition is rest of the voice, the second step being direct application of some remedial agent. The inhaling of medicated vapors is sometimes extremely helpful in mild inflammations of the vocal cords.

The Question Box

Information on almost any subject can be secured by sending questions to the Post-Crescent Information Bureau, Fredric J. Haskin, director, Washington, D. C. The bureau does not answer questions pertaining to medicine nor does it express opinions on the merits of stocks and bonds. Send a 2-cent stamp or a stamped and self-adressed envelope with your question.

Q. Why isn't the heat and power of volcanoes utilized? C. T. S.

A. Attempts have been made to develop power from volcanoes, although not to any great extent. The idea was suggested by the well known engineer Prince Conti. In Italy jets called soffioni from boiling pools have been harnessed by sinking iron tubes to a depth of from 200 to 500 feet. At the surface the steam has a pressure of two atmospheres, and there is evidence of enormous untapped supplies. In northern Italy some of this power has been used to turn factory wheels by da, and to illuminate the street by night.

Q. What is the size of Manhattan Island? J. M.

A. Manhattan Island, which contains the chief offices of New York City, its greatest banks, business houses museums, tenements, and palaces, is 13½ miles long a greatest width of 2¼ miles at 14th Street.

Q. What is the weight of a barrel of sugar and of a barrel of flour? E. O. W.

A. The Bureau of Standards says that sugar sold in barrels is sold on the basis of the actual net weight of the sugar contained in the barrel. This weight will vary from time to time, even in the same refinery, due to differences in the character of crystallization of the sugar and other causes: the approximate net weight is 350 pounds. Flour is ordinarily sold in barrels of 196 pounds net weight.

Q. Is there a league for the prevention of suicide? D. W. G.

A. There is a Save-A-Life League with headquarters at 5 East 12th St., New York City.

Q. In the last year how many passenger air lines were there in the United States? N. M.

A. In 1926 only six lines attempted scheduled passenger business.

HE'S FOR CALLERS

Editor, Post-Crescent—Your editorial of July 28th on the Stillman wedding was very interesting and to the point, and believe the majority of the people who are able to think will agree with you.

If there were more marriages of this kind in high society, there would be less divorces and fewer nitwits among them.

Also your editorial of July 29th on wet fanaticism was very good.

But it seems when you write on Mexico, you can not get things straight. I spent five months on the border last winter and visited Mexico often, but failed to hear of any dissatisfaction regarding Pres. Calles.

I did a lot of listening and asked a great many questions, and found that very little of what was sent broadcast by the A. P. had any truth in it.

As to confiscating property of foreigners, is nothing but propaganda, the same as sent out by certain organizations who would like to see this country at war with Mexico.

I failed to hear of any of those truth about Mexico speakers visiting the border cities of Texas. They probably would have been invited to tell it to the Marines.

I wonder what our Government would do if foreign capital sent men into the U. S. on our mineral and oil land unbeknown to our Government, and drilled test holes and after finding what they wanted, plugged the holes and covered their operations. And then went to Washington and bought the land at 40 or 50 cents an acre. And after the Government found out how they had been fleeced, do you think they would do any different than the Mexican government is doing?

Acording to reports on the border, that's what these oil and mineral sharks did in Mexico. There never will be any intervention in Mexico as long as we have a majority of level headed men in the U. S. Senate and Congress.

Mexico is well able to take care of her own affairs without outside help, and the people are not as bad as painted, if given a chance.

Anti-Calles propaganda must be profitable to the press or there would not be so much of it printed.

I think it about time the press ceased to send out this propaganda against Mexico. Don't you?

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Attempts have been made on the life of ELISE MARBERRY, an American girl who owns and manages considerable property near the little town of PORTO VERDE, in west central Brazil.

Several mysterious deaths have occurred, but so far she has escaped harm, due to the shrewdness of her cousin and protector, VILAK, who masquerades as her attorney under the name of DAVIS. Vilak is a curious mixture of American and Oriental blood and a student of criminology. He tries to persuade Elise to leave the country, leaving him there with his friend, LINCOLN NUNALLY, an elderly American chemist, to solve the mystery.

After her two-year-old orphaned nephew is kidnaped, to be found again by the alert Vilak, and another attempt is made on their lives, Elise agrees.

Her departure is prevented by threat of floods. Messengers ride through the countryside, warning the natives. Vilak decides to go to the house of GAYLORD PRENTISS, a recluse and a forbidding man and an enemy of Elise's, whom she suspects of a knowledge of the conspiracy against her. Nevertheless, she agrees it is their duty to warn him.

Vilak learns that the flood warning was a ruse to get Prentiss out of his house and so informs him. The party is besieged in a small stone tower next to Prentiss' house by armed attackers. Vilak finally disperses them by dynamiting a dam and causing a real flood. When the water recedes they discover Prentiss has gone.

The next day, TINKY, Elise's little nephew, is stolen again. The trail leads into the jungle. A native reports Prentiss has been seen with a baby. Vilak makes preparations for a long journey in pursuit. With natives trackers, they take up the taril.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXV

For two more days they traveled without seeing a sign of either humanity or human habition except the sharp machete cuts in the branches and the crushed vegetation underfoot which showed them their course.

Then on the morning of the fifth day out from Porto Verde, on a low mound rising slightly above the level of the forest, they came to what appeared to be a secondary trail coming from a slightly different direction and joining their own.

Here Vilak examined the ground carefully. Between clumps of tall grass he found a number of cigaret stubs. They were filled with a cheap, coarse tobacco, rolled by hand. Evidently the smoker had exhausted his supply of papers, for most of the cigarets were rolled in bits of newspaper, torn envelopes and other odds and ends a man ordinarily carries in his pocket.

Quickly Vilak picked these up and deftly unrolling them, spread them out upon a log. He concentrated his attention upon the bits of envelope. A moment later he grunted, then extended two of the scraps to Elsie. "Look at that," he flashed.

The fragments bore part of an English postmark and the full name of Elise' English foreman who had escaped from the Porto Verde jail after the murder of Tony Barbetta.

When they halted at noon for the midday meal, Vilak distributed rifles to half of the natives who had hitherto been permitted to carry only spears. "We're being watched all the time now," he said to Elise and Nunnally, who had glanced at him inquisitively. "No use worrying about it, but I'm certain it's so. I've heard rustles in the trees three or four times this morning. They weren't caused by monkeys or we'd have known it by being screamed at, or having sticks and fruit rained down upon us."

That night the guard was doubled. The hidden watchers, however, gave no sign of their presence.

It was almost a week later when the sun was high in the sky that they came within sight of their first Indian village, twenty or thirty reed huts built in the shape of low cones so that in the distance they appeared like great gray anthills. As they approached, the Tartar-like guide suddenly gave three loud cries and began a long noisy rhapsody in a high-pitched, wailing dialect.

Four warriors of the village came hurrying out from the rush shelters, holding drawn bows. They planted themselves squarely in the path of the newcomers. Completely naked except for a breech clout and undecorated except for a little striped tattooing around the elbows and knees, they stood rigid, shining bronze statues barrying the way.

"Marvelous bodies," Vilak murmured to Nunnally, as the guide continued his shrill oration. "Pronounced Oriental strain in them, too, undoubtedly. Look at the shape of their heads and the slant of their eyes. That tattooing also is absolutely the same as I could show you in a hundred places in the islands off East Asia. Judging by the way they're looking at us, we're the first white men they've seen."

The guide's declamation at length ceased. The headsman of the village, a grizzled withered shell, who appeared as though three centuries had passed over his long gray head, stalked gravely out from the largest hut. Behind him toddled two enormously fat old women.

He grunted to the rigid warriors. Their bows relaxed, they moved off to the wall of the structure from which the headman had come. The chief engaged the guide in a short parley, then convinced that the newcomers' intentions were not hostile, greeted them cordially. Food was brought, swamp-deer, roasted tapir, berries an dset on grass mats. Vilak responded to the courtesy by presenting his host with a necklace of atrociously colored beads, of which he had been careful to bring a liberal supply.

The headman barked an order; all the women in the village, who had been curiously peeping at the newcomers through the cracks in their houses, ran forward. They began a dance.

They were in a long, compact semi-circle, violently hopping up and down forward and leaping back, all to the accompaniment of a skin drum which a purple-feathered Indian was beating frantically, when Vilak happened to strike a match to light a cigaret.

The flare o fthe tiny flame was as though lightning has struck the assembly. The women ran screaming back to their houses; the soldiers threw themselves flat on the ground, beating their heads at Vilak's feet; the withered chief darted behind a tree.

Seeing the panic and instantly comprehending its cause, Vilak blew out the flaming match. The chief saw and slowly began coming from behind the tree; the bowmen scrambled to their feet; the women one by one drifted back.

"Lord, what an effect!" chuckled Vilak to Nunnally, as the chief advanced with some hesitancy to them. "Silly of me, though. Should have known that practically all the tribes we'll meet are fire worshippers. Commonest thing in all savage life. Undoubtedly never saw a match before. They'll be turning us into gods, and making us eat rancid butter the way they do in Tibet if we're not careful.

The chief warily sat down beside him. Vilak let him feel the box, examine the match itself, then painstakingly demonstrated how the fire was created by striking the one against the other.

The old man grinned, then eagerly followed his example. His delight was unbounded when Vilak presented him with the marvel. The broken line of dancers reformed; the dance proceeded to a furious climax and ended. More tapir and berries were brought.

Vilak now tried talking to his host in the Guarany dialect, which extends like a mother-tongue through most of the savage tribes of South America. Finding himself understood, he inquired whether the Indians lately pass that way with a child.

The chief shook his head. His village was a hunting village; regularly all the men went off to the jungle, leaving none but the women and children behind. At these times the women dared not venture far from their houses and consequently knew nothing of what passed in the nearby forests. The men had just returned from a week's hunt the day before; therefore he could tell them nothing.

The chief asked Vilak his destination. Vilak pointed vaguely off into the direction the trail had been constantly leading. The chief shook his withered head again and grunted. "No go there. Listen me, Bagarundi. Spirits there. No go. Devils there. In valley. Green valley. On mountain. Red mountain. Devil mountain. Kill you. Kill girl. Quick. Too quick. Listen Bagarundi. Bagarundi wise."

At the chief's urgent invitation, they pitched their camp in the village for the night. Then a smudge fire was kindled to drive away the swarming mosquitoes; the old man began droning out the ancient legends of his people to all his visitors who could understand.

Shortly before midnight the Americans entered the hut which had been reserved for their reception. Vilak poked a suspicious-looking corner with a stick to rout out any tarantulas that might be hiding within, then hung his hammock.

"I'd be convinced now that these South American Indians were Asiatic in their origin even if I hadn't been before," he said to Nunnally as he disentangled a hook which had caught in the mesh.

"Those legends the old man related tonight can be reproduced in half a dozen places in Eastern Asia and the Asiatic islands. That story about the man who walked through the fire and thereby became a god, particularly. It's almost like being in the Malay archipelago to hear it again. They still walk through fire, for that matter, in some of the outlying Japanese islands and Fiji and Guinea. A trick, of course. Know exactly how it's done. It's the way the shamans and priests keep their power.

"World's a pretty small place. Interesting chap, this old man. Doesn't seem very encouraging about our prospects ahead."

(To Be Continued)

Disaster catches up with the expedition and Vilak finds traitors in his ranks.

OUTSTANDING ACTS FOR SEYMOUR FAIR

New Stunts Are Secured to Be Features of 1927 Program of Entertainment

A thrilling vaudeville bill, recruited from the leading theatrical circuits of the country, will be presented in front of the grandstand at the coming Seymour Fair, Seymour, August 22-25.

New stunts, combining greater skill and more daring than acts previously engaged for the fair, will feature this year's program. Fair officials were forced to bid high for several of the attractions that were wanted by other fairs which will be held the same week, but the local fair won out because it offered the most liberal contracts. Among the outstanding acts on the bill are the Four Montforts, Gus Henderson, Billy Sunday Comedy Circus, Jung Brothers, Flo Jordan and Boys, and the Original Dobas.

Interest in this year's entertainment program will not be limited to the vaudeville acts, according to officials. A balanced program of events has been arranged that will feature horse racing, horse pulling contest, fireworks and a big carnival.

Secretary Fiedler is highly gratified with the large numbers of entries that have been received for the educational depaftments. The livestock show in particular, will be big this year, with record exhibits of cattle, horses, sheep and swine.

STAGE And SCREEN

"THE NERVOUS WRECK"

What will unquestionably prove to be the outstanding laugh hit of the season is "The Nervous Wreck," an Al Christie comedy based on the celebrated stage play by Owen Davis. Harrison Ford, Phyllis Haver, Chester Conklin, Mack Swain and Hobart Bosworth head the large cast of players. Scott Sidney, who directed "Charley's Aunt," also directed "The Nervous Wreck," which comes to Fischer's Appleton Theatre on Saturday and Sunday.

The first of the comedy sequences reveals the secret that Henry Williams, newly arrived on Jud Morgan's ranch "to die in the wide open spaces," is not nearly so near the brink of death as he believes. After that, adventure befalls him so fast that he scarcely has time to take his remedies. While taking Sally in his flivver to the train the gas gives out and the "Wreck" has to hold up a Rolls Royce for gas, bearing James Underwood, the owner of a large ranch to which the "Wreck" and the girl later flee to evade a posse out for their capture as bandits.

The "Wreck" and Sally are disguised as the cook and dishwasher in Underwood's household. Sally's fiance, father and former friends arrive with the avowed intention of stringing the "Wreck" from a tree. In the thrilling yet hilarious climax the "Wreck" has to fight to win the right to die in peace, whereupon he realizes that perhaps his maladies can be overcome, and the fight for Sally's hand becomes more exciting to him than thoughts of a decent burial.

SEE MIAMI'S DEEP
SEA MONSTER
45 Feet Long, Weight 30,000 Pounds
Creature, which has baffled scientific authorities, was captured after a 29-hour battle by Captain Thompson, of Knight's Key. Five harpoon thrusts and 151 large calibre bullets only served to increase the fury of the monster and, at open sea, it dragged a small boat containing three men at express train speed for hundreds of miles.
WHAT IS IT?
The creature is not classified in natural history, but it is the largest specimen of the fish tribe ever seen or captured. It is neither whale nor shark.
Scientific authorities believe the creature was an inhabitant of depths of more than 1,500 feet under surface of the ocean and was blown up by some subterranean or volcanic upheaval, which injured its living apparatus so that it was unable to return to its native haunts.

ARE CONVENTIONS SUPERFICIAL?

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

WHAT is the right standard of living?

When do we know that we are letting down the bars of convention too much, and when too little?

Why do we not live like the pioneers of old in a little shack of one or two rooms? Why do we use tablecloths and silver forks on our tables and spreads on our beds?

When do convention and decent living become extravagance? How are we to know the things we may do without and the things that social usage says we must have?

A young married woman living in a western city, declared that by living out near the mine, of which her husband was superintendent, they could save money. There would be no standard of living to keep up and it was their chance to pile up a goodly sized bank account.

Ten years alter, a timid shabbily dressed person called upon an old friend in the city, who, to the friend's astonishment, proved to be the young woman who had so courageously left convention behind and braved life in the wilds with her mining husband.

She had come for advice. "I should have come sooner," she said, hesitatingly. "But I did not realize what was happening to us. I've been out of touch with people and things for so long I haven't dared to venture near any of my old haunts.

"We started by saving on laundry. We used oilcloth on the table. I wasn't very well, so to save steps we ate in the little kitchen. I never dressed in the evening, as there was no one to see me. Steve came home tired and dirty. We had no bathroom and he'd just wash his hands, take off his coat and sit down to supper. He said there was no use in shaving—no one saw him but the Mexican miners and their families. I was usually too tired to read, so gave up trying to keep up on things. We did let down dreadfully.

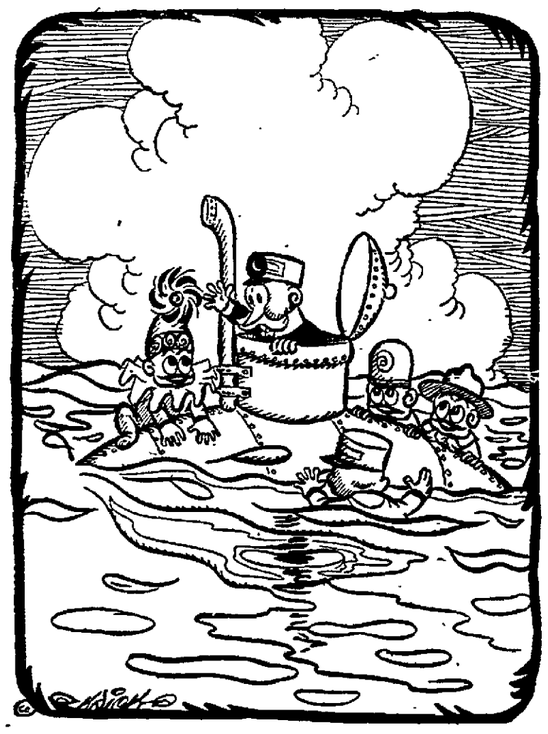

"We have a little money now, but aren's we too far gone to enjoy it? I have no sense of values left. I can't even talk to people.

"No," said the friend. "But you will be if you keep it up a minute longer. You've lost your ideas of values but you will get them back in time. I'll help you."

Convention looks like a superficial thing, but is it? Does it not choose our values for us—take the responsibility of living, so to speak, and keep us up to the mark?

THE TINYMITES

By Hal Cochran

READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE

THE smokestack, made of peppermint, had melted to a mixed-up tint. The ship itself was spreading out upon the whipped cream sea. The sun kept shining mighty hot. The Tinies knew that, like as not, in a half hour or maybe less, in trouble they would be.

Across the Taffy Clowny ran, a-shouting, "Where's the Taffy Man?" I'll bet he'd help us if he knew our boat was fading out. There's nothing left now but the rim of our good ship. We'll have to swim. I wonder if 'twould do much good if we would stand and shout."

Then Scouty said, "Let's try that plan, and yell as loudly as we can. Perhaps someone will hear us and will save us from the sea." So, up they stood, this frightened crowd, and all of them yelled, right out loud, "Please help this bunch of Tinymites. We're scared as we can be."

Just then the whipped cream, near at hand, began to foam to beat the band. It looked just like a geyser as it jumped up in the air. "Oh, look!" said Carpy, "Goodness me, a boat's come right up from the sea, and now it's heading for us. Gee, this gives me quite a scare."

Then Coppy yelled, with interest keen, "Why, say, that thing's a submarine. I'll bet it's coming after us. At least, I hope that's true." And, sure enough, the boat came near, and filled the Tinymites with cheer, for, from the upper part of it, a man was peeking through.

He shouted, "Say, I have a hunch I'd better rescue all your bunch. Just climb aboard my submarine. 'Tis well that you were found." And so, the Tinies did as told and shortly they had grabbed a hold and climbed up on the sub. Then Scouty said, "We're safe and sound."

(The submarine runs up on land in the next story).

Prim White Bids Adieu As Gay Colors Step Into Popularity; Plump Women Should Beware Of Pink

Biarritz, France, Aug. 6.

Dear Cousin:

Having just arrived in this lovely spot, and being still enchanted by the beauty of the scenery and the dramatic setting of the place, my mind is somewhat less organized than usual. All the women look so beautiful and the costumes are so marvelous, I cannot get down to cases.

However, one fact has impressed itself upon my consciousness—the spell of pure white is broken, and color reigns everywhere. The white evening gown is no longer content to look merely angelic, but adds brilliance and dash.

It is indeed fortunate for me that I forsaw this and made two wise purchases just before I left Paris—one a large shawl of metal cloth which has dull gold figures on a ground of the most marvelous American beauty red.

COMES TO RESCUE

Over any of my simple chiffon frocks, most of which are white, pink, or black, it comes to the rescue and gives an illusion of gorgeousness, yet it can be easily dispensed with when extreme artlessness is advisable. It just matches some very snappy red satin slippers I have with very high heel and velvet bows, that always make my feet take an interest in dancing.

My other purchase was one of the new sport type evening gowns, the upper part of gold brocade and the skirt of yellow satin. The reason I was particularly intrigued by it was because the model wearing it had yellow hair and the whole effect was delightful. When I tried on my own, I realized that the blondeness was really part of the ensemble. But it isn't so bad with my darker hair—at least for people who did not see it on the blonde.

SIMPLE AND CHIC

Last evening I saw an evening gown that was a triumph of simplicity and chic. It was this lovely fushcia shade of transparent velvet, cut with a surplice closing and a skirt with rippling godets. The godets, however, were contrived so that they did not add to the actual width of the skirt and the close narrow line was retained well below the hips.

A stunning note here is the use of wide velvet girdles, some of them tied in lovely bows with many loops and long ends. The velvet of this season is simply beyond words.

In a short time I have seen a number of satin evening frocks, particularly in pastel colors, with as many diamond bracelets as the wearer could flaunt.

LUSCIOUS IBIS

Pink satin, they call it ibis, I believe, is about as luscious a material as has ever been devised, and equally lovely on a light or a dark woman. However, I think satin of any color is very unkind to any save the slender woman. It's way of adding highlights to curves that should be shadowed ought to make it very unpopular with those who won't diet.

I saw a gorgeous embroidered frock last evening. The foundation seemed to be a very dull green crepe, and it was embroidered in faded blue and rose that gave it the feeling of an old tapestry. Some bead fringe in harmonizing colors edged the bolero and the very short skirt.

Mother has a lovely new dinner gown. It is of black satin crepe with the crepe used for the main part of the gown, but the glossy surface inserted in two very full godets in the front of the skirt. The blouse is cut with diagonal inserts of the satin surface. On the shoulder is a really lovely flower of black and white velvet. She is quite regal in it, for mother's figure is marvelous.

KERCHIEF MARVELS

The kerchiefs here, which everyone wears with simple sport frocks are marvels of color and design. Those of chiffon with colored borders are particularly lovely, I think. And the jewels are superb. Premet's gold chains and Chanel's crystal effects are the rage.

We are going over to San Sebastian next week, and possibly we may stay a few days. If so, I can probably tell you what the Spanish senioritas are wearing.

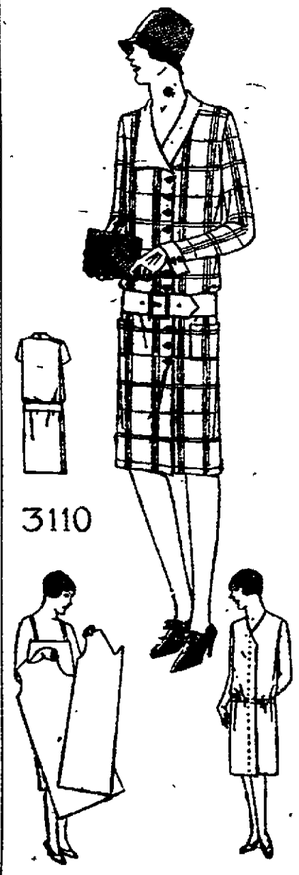

Do keep me informed as to all the gossip on your side of the Atlantic, and accept loads of love from your loving cousin.

SAINT AND SINNER

By Anne Austin

Faith never knew how long she sat, motionless, in the little rocking chair beside the open window, Chery's baby—still unnamed, because they could not find a name exquisite enough for so exquisite a child—sweetly asleep in her lap. She felt as weak and exhausted as if she had gone through a devastating illness—as indeed she had, an illness which, unknown to the gentle, sacrificing heart of her, had been poisoned her body and mind and soul for years.

That terrible outburst of hers, in which she had berated both Cherry and Bob, had been the crisis of that illness, and, not at all curiously, though she was fully amazed, she felt lighter and freed, in spite of that almost paralyzing exhaustion, than she had felt for years. Sickening waves of remorse rolled over her, but underneath them was a steadfast gladness which she could not quell.

The fact was she had been ignored, as a person, for so long that she had almost come to believe that she had no distinct personality. Cast into the shadows of mediocrity by Cherry's flaming beauty, wit and charm, Faith had accepted her family's rating of her uncomplainingly. She had had no sweethearts worthy of the name until George Pruitt had singled her out as the most beautiful specimen of young womanhood that he had ever seen. And Cherry had even tried to take George away from her. Bob Hathaway had scarcely seen her, had not been at all aware of her as a girl worthy of love, until he had been engaged to Cherry and his too-trustful heart bruised under her imperious little heel.

And Faith knew, as she sat very still, with Chery's baby a featherlight burden upon her knees, that it was she whom he loved, as a man wants to love the one woman, and not Cherry.

Well—she drew a deep, quivering breath that hurt—she had lost him now, lost him irrevocably to Cherry. But Cherry had always had him—probably not the best of him, but the romantic core of his heart. After tonight, when she had turned like a vixen upon her husband and her sister, Bob could not pretend to himself or her any longer that he loved her. He would have his excuse to leave her. Poor Bob. It was characteristic of Faith that she felt sorry for her husband, even while her own heart was like lead in her breast.

She had believed she could make him happy, he being what he was—chivalrous, thoroughly good, sweet, infinitely kind; and she being what she was—thoroughly good, born to be a wife and a mother, unselfish to the point of being ridiculous. But they had been married less than five months, and already Bob was hardly recognizable as the man she had married. Poor Bob! Dear Bob! Tears for him, for his tragedy, began to slip down her cheeks strangely hot against the iciness of her flesh.

How tired he looked, and much older, grim about the mouth, harassed of eye—those beautiful blue eyes that had sparkled with such a boyish delight in life; he had failed to land the biggest opportunity that had ever come his way—the contract to build the new public library; his young shoulders were already stooping under the burden of expense which she had brought to him, in saddling him with her family. Surely it would be better for Bob if she had so disgusted him with herself that he would welcome her offer of his freedom.

Twilight had settled like a thick gray fog, heavy with heat, when a knock came softly upn her locked door.

TOMORROW: A deadlock.

FAMOUS FILM TEAMS NOW RIVAL GLORY OF THE INDIVIDUAL STARS

BY DON THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., — One of the things the cinema bosses are learning as their "child" grows up is the value of teams. Experience has proved that certain minds coordinate more readily than others. For example, Tod Browning has never directed a poor picture starring Lon Chaney. He has directed the "man of a thousand faces" in four productions, writing three of the stories himself. He is now writing a fourth.

William Haines can work better with Edward Sedgwick than with any other director. And then there are various acting teams, notably the Wally Beery-Raymond Hatton combination, that rival the individual stars in glory and wealth producing.

I WOULD be willing to bet that Monte Blue will be sympathizing with Jack Sharkey before he finishes his current film, "One Round Hogan." Jim Jeffries, one time heavyweight champion of the world, has been signed for a featured role in the picture and has also been assigned the duty of conditioning Monte. Jim still packs a terrific wallop and by the time Monte takes a few of them on the chin he will know just how Sharkey felt when he met one Jack Dempsey not long ago.

TODAY'S mail brought a letter from Claire De Lorez, who is now in Paris. Two years ago Claire couldn't even get work as an "extra" in Hollywood, so she went to Europe to make pictures. She will return soon as a star. She writes that she has been selected to play the leading feminine role in "Madonna of the Sleeping Cars," a story by Maurice Dekobra, noted French humorist. All of which goes to prove that if you can't make good in one place, maybe you can in another.

Theater audience as a rule do not take such persons seriously. They think of them as merely being "made-up." But even in the town of hypocrites there is realism. Household Hints

BLACKENING STOVE

Before polishing your stove, go over it all with vinegar. It will remove all grease and makes excellent base for polish.

GOOD FRYING

Cooking food in deep fat is merely boiling it in fat instead of water. Fat must entirely cover food and really be kept at boiling point.

TASTY CABBAGE

Cut fresh young cabbage and cook slightly, in uncovered boiling water. Drain and serve with Hollandaise sauce. It is delicate and delicious.

CARROT SALAD

Dice raw carrots and serve with tiny balls of cottage cheese, on lettuce or romaine. Add a taste of chives to the French dressing.

CHILDREN'S MILK

Children will drink and enjoy their milk if given to them in a small glass or cup all their own with a small pitcher to pour it from.

CHILDREN'S DESERTS

Sherberts from fruit juices, such as lemon, orange, raspberry, grape or cherry, are easier to make than ice cream and better for children.

COOK BERRIES IN SUN SAYS NEGRO MAMMY

HERE IS THE THIRD OF FOUR ARTICLES ON THE FAVORITE RECIPES OF OUR CONGRESSWOMEN.

By NEA Service

MRS. Florence Langley of Pikeville, Ky., who succeeds her husband, John W. Langley, in Congress, inherited from her old negro cook and mammy, a recipe for strawberry preserves long famous in the sunny southland.

They are called appropriately, "Sunshine preserves."

Three pounds of strawberries, three pounds of sugar, 3-4 cup of water.

"The secret of these preserves," says Mrs. Langley, "lies in the fact that they are cooked by the sun. Put on the range, bring to a boil, and let boil hard for 15 minutes. Pour into a pan and put in the sun where they must stand 24 hours until they are jellied."

Mrs. Langley has another recipe equally famous in the culinary history of Kentucky. It is for watermelon preserves, one of the time-honored preserves of the south.

Seven pounds of fruit, three pounds of sugar, one pint vinegar.

Put on range and after it begins to cook, add 1 tablespoon of cloves and 3 or 4 pieces of ginger. Let boil until syrup covers the fruit.

There is a pyramid near Puebla, Mexico, that is comparable to the pyramids of Egypt. It was erected by the Toltec Indians, is more than 200 feet high and has a base line of 1,050 feet. The largest Egyptian pyramid, Cheops, has a baseline of 440 feet and is 400 feet high.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

LUNCHEON—Casserole of vegetables, brown bread, cottage cheese, nut cookies, lemonade.

DINNER — Rolled flank of beef, mashed potatoes, ten-minute cabbage, romaine salad, apple pie, milk, coffee.

When making oven toast be sure that the toast is dried to the state of crispness. If the toast is merely hard it will not be popular with the family, but if it's crisp and crumbly they can't resist it.

CASSEROLE OF VEGETABLES

Eight small onions, 2 cups green beans, 4 medium sized tomatoes, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper, 3 tablespoons buttered crumbs, 1 cup chopped cooked meat.

Choose tiny silver skinned onions. Peele and cook in boiling water until tender but not broken. Cook beans in boiling water to barely cover until water is cooked away. Scald and peel tomatoes. Cut in slices and cook ten minutes. Rub through a coarse sieve to remove seeds. Melt butter, stir in flour and slowly add tomato puree, stirring constantly. Season with salt and pepper and add chopped meat. Arrange onions in a well buttered baking dish and fill spaces between onions with beans. Pour over tomato sauce, covered with buttered crumbs and bake twenty-five minutes in a hot oven.

WISCONSIN WEATHE R

Unsettled this afternoon; mostly fair tonight and Sunday; somewhat cooler Sunday and in north portion tonight.

WEATHER CONDITIONS

The pressure is rather flat over most of the country this morning. It is highest over the eastern states, with fair weather. The only low pressure area of consequence overlies the Lake Superior district, which is developing local showers over the upper lake region. This should cause some cloudiness in this section this afternoon and tonight. This "low" is followed by slightly higher pressure over the northern Rockies and should cause a slight fall in temperature in this section by Sunday as it advances, with generally fair weather.

WILL THEY LET IT GROW?

Hollywood is letting her hair grow again. The fad of bobs in the movie capital is passe they say, and long hair has returned. Will the country follow Hollywood? Some say yes, some no. At any rate here is Jeanette Loff, with long hair, and it doesn't look so awfully bad, no, not so very.

How To Play Bridge

By Milton C. Work

WITH A STRONG HAND CONTAINING BUT ONE STOPPER IN THE ADVERSE SUIT, NO TRUMP SHOULD BE CALLED IF PARTNER HAS BID.

Yesterday's Hand

♠ 10-5-3-2
♥ K-4-3
♦ A-Q-7
♣ A-Q-10

My answer slip reads as follows:

No. 17. South (Dealer) should bid one No Trump.

No. 18. South one Heart; West should double.

No. 19. South one Club, West one Heart; North should bid one No Trump.

No. 20. South pass, West one Heart, North pass; East should bid one No Trump or pass.

My reasons in support of these declarations are:

No. 17. Clearly a Dealer's No Trump.

No. 18. With but one stopper in the adverse suit, a double is better than a No Trump.

No. 19. Although the adverse suit contains but one stopper, partner has bid. Five Club tricks are assured and partner must have at least the Ace of Spades — probably greater side strength. A situation in which No Trump should be bid even with only one stopper of the adverse suit.

No. 20. Very close between one No Trump and a pass. The pass, fully in accordance with the rules of bidding would be perfectly sound and could not be criticized. The hand however, looks as if a No Trump might produce better results. Possibly the determining test should be whether East or West is the better player. If West's game be more dependable, pass; if East's be more dependable, then bid No Trump.

KAUKAUNA MEETS GREEN BAY BALL TEAM ON SUNDAY

Kaws Are Hopeful That They Can Pull Themselves Out of Cellar

Kaukauna—About a hundred Kaukauna fans are expected to trek northward Sunday to see the rejuvenated local baseball team battle Green Bay on the Bay diamond. Much interest has been shown in the team the past two weeks and hopes are high that the Kaws can pull themselves out of the cellar.

Word has been definitely received that Richard "Red" Smith will not appear in an Electric City uniform. It appears that the powers that be decided Smith was needed where he is, with the Newark club, a Giant farm, more than at Kaukauna. Ill health had prompted "Red" to ask for a leave of absence but he now seems to have regained his usual vigor.

MAY GET PLAYER

One new player may cavort in an Electric City uniform. Al Gosha, formerly with the Appleton club. Rumor is that Gosha had a run in with the Papermaker managers and that Les Smith, new local manager, secured his release. Gosha may be used at short in place of Wall. A twisted knee and ankle have kept Gosha on the shelf for several weeks and whether he can go through a whole game at top speed is a question. Gosha will be remembered as the fellow who replaced Brautigan at short for Appleton in its last performance here.

The remainder of the Electric City lineup is to remain intact. Gertz will do the heaving. Wenzel will be back of the plate and if he has regained his batting eye should be th best receiver in the circuit. Much of the fireworks in the Kaukauna batting column will depend upon what Manager Smith and his huge war club can accomplish.

THINGS LOOK BLUE

Green Bay is reported to be in the dumps following its defeat at the hands of Neenah last week and is looking at things through indigo glasses. Eddie Glick broke a finger during the game and a new catcher is being tried. Loeffler, who has played centerfield for several games, is slated to don the armor.

"Lew" Lewellen will pitch for the Bays and if he is "right" it may be a tough afternoon. However, he has been having plenty of trouble with opposing batsmen and last Sunday gave way before an onslaught of Neenah hits.

The Bays boast a real bunch of sluggers of which group Clusman, shortstop, is most to be feared. The tubby infielder takes a terrific cut at the ball and if given a good one can easily park it over the barn in the leftfield of the Green Sox' diamond.

Farmers' Gathering Sponsored by Grange Will Be Held August 14

Kaukauna—Over ten thousand persons are expected to attend the farmers' picnic given by the Grange societies in this district on Sunday, Aug. 14, at Kline's park. Final arrangements and plans for the outing will be made Saturday night when local business men and members of committees will meet at the Elk hall.

The parade scheduled at 10:30 is the first official event of the day. At the present time plans call for a motorcycle officer from the local department to lead the parade and clear the route with Charles Grode, prominent town of Harrison farmer, assisting him on horseback. Following these two will be the color guard, made up of American legion members in uniform. The Moose band will occupy a place in the line of march and will be followed by the floats of local merchants, business men and club organizations. Speeches will follow the lunch. Mayor W. C. Sullivan will give the address of welcome on behalf of the city of Kaukauna. Response from the farmers will be given by Herman Ihde, general chairman of the picnic, and by B. E. Billington, of the Wisconsin Cheese Producers Federation. Arlie Mucks, former athletic star at the University of Wisconsin and now secretary of the Wisconsin Live Stock Breeders association, also will speak.

At 2 o'clock a ladies pillow casing contest will be held and will be followed by other contests for adults, prizes for which have been donated by Kaukauna merchants. Games and contests for the children will begin at 2:30 under the direction of William "Tiger Bill" Smith, Kaukauna high school coach. Prizes will be awarded the winners in these contests. A baseball game between the Zion Grange and South Greenville Grange is planned and the Kaukauna city team meets Menasha in a league contest at the league diamond.

BAND WILL PLAY

Plans are being made to have a contest between the several ladies and mens quarters which are members of the grange societies. The Moose band of 24 pieces will play during the entire day.

Prizes will be awarded as follows: To the tallest person; the oldest person; the largest family; person coming greatest distance to the picnic; farmers hauling the most milk to the federation factory in 1926; farmers shipping most stock first six months of 1927 through the shipping association and to the cheese maker having made cheese the longest.

CAMP MEETING TO BE HELD IN VILLAGE

Dr. A. E. Hangen of Cleveland Is Chief Speaker at Evangelical Meet

Forest Junction — Programs, sent out this week from the office of the district secretary, Miss Hazel Peper, route 3, Greenleaf, announced the annual camp meeting and Christian Endeavor and Sunday school convention of the Appleton district of the Wisconsin conference of the Evangelical church, which will be held at the district camp grounds here near the close of this month. The camp meeting will open Friday evening, August 19, and continues until Thursday afternoon, August 25, when the annual business meeting of the camp meeting assolcation will be held. The Christian Endeavor and Sunday school convention will follow, beginning Thursday evening and closing Sunday evening, August 28.

The meetings over the first Sunday will be the regular quarterly session for the Forest Junction, Brillion, Reedsville, and Morrison fields, with the respective quarterly conference sessions in connection, conducted by the Rev. Phillip Schneider of Appleton, presiding elder of the district. Dr. H. J. Kiekhofer of Whiting, Ind., former president of North Central college, Naperville, Ill., will be the special speaker for the camp meeting. Dr. A. E. The meeting grounds are located on the north side of federal highway 10 just before entering the village from the west. A dining hall and dormitory will accommodate delegates and visitors, while many will encamp for the duration of the meetings in the cottages and tents surrounding the tabernacle.

OLD ALASKAN LEAD DOG ON JOB AGAIN

"Old Chinook" Leaves Retirement to Aid Byrd in Flight to Pole

BY GENE COHN

Wonalancet, N. H. — They have called "old Chinook" back to the snow trails.

They have asked him to give up a well earned retirement and to muster his sturdy sons and daughters for one last trek that will call out every ounce of endurance and sagacity in a lead dog's make-up.

Old Chinook and his malamute pack must save the day if the whirring propellors of a machine-age monster fail to ride the Antarctic gales in Commander Byrd's forthcoming dash for the South Pole.

In a sense it is to be Chinook's toughest race—and this husky from the kennels of Arthur T. Walden boasts a long line of victories the last of which was his leadership of a six-dog team to the top of Mt. Washington in the face of terrific winds and handicaps of ice and temperature.

RESERVE TRANSPORTATION

The Polar dash is quite different. Given a good break in the weather, a plane will take off from Ross barrier, spin over the mountain ranges, and land within shouting distance of the goal. And Chinook would then be merely the doughty trail blazer, packing in the supplies that will provision stations 100 miles apart, as planned by Byrd.

But let those Antarctic flurries come up, or accident overtake the machinery —and it will be Chinook who will live in song and story along with the intrepid men who battle it out with him. After all, the plane is a speculation, and Chinook and his tireless have a proud record of dependability.

Only age can defeat Chinook. The old fellow became a leader of dog teams in the Yukon many years ago. He adventured on Bering Sea ice and mushed from mining camp to mining camp in Alaska. In the old days when miner's law ruled the northland, his trail ran from Circle City to Dawson draging a load of 600 pounds of supplies on a three-sled freight outfit equiped with gee poles —a trip that lasted from 27 days to a month.

That's what they'll need in the Antarctic—dogs that have stood the test!

LAST MUSH TOGETHER

A year ago Walden announced that Chinook had made his last appearance, but when Commander Byrd asked Walden for a dog outfit, the breeder looked around and walked over to Chinook's kennel.

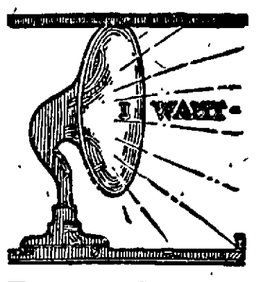

"Well, we're going on one last mush together," said Walden. And Chinook barked his readiness.

Walden made but one request of Byrd. If Chinook lives through the trip he must not be abandoned, as dogs have been before. He must be brought back! And nodded his consent.

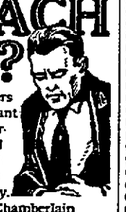

BIG TOOTH

The mastodons that roamed America acons ago were gigantic animals and needed big teeth to eat with. They had 'em, too—as witness this mastodon's tooth, displayed by Miss Grace Porter of Ludlow, Ky. The tooth, in nearly perfect condition, was found in a gravel pit near Cleves, O.

19-YEAR OLD MILWAUKEE PHENOM WINS STATE GOLF TITLE

Consistent Play Gives Buddy Russell Victory Over Morgan Manchester

New Titles Crowned on 32nd Hole of Buttes des Morts Course, 5 and 4

J. A. (Buddy) Russell of the Milwaukee Country club brilliantly but modestly won the Wisconsin Amateur golf championship about 4 o'clock Friday afternoon when he sunk a four-foot putt on the thirty-second hole of a 36 hole match, thereby defeating Morgan Manchester of Madison, 5 and 4. The match ended on the fourteenth green of the Butte des Morts course.

Russell, only 19 years old, played consistent golf all during the tournament and proved his right to the championship. Bracketed with some of the outtsanding stars of the state, he came through in brilliant fashion, displaying an iron nerve which indicates he will go far in golf if he keeps at the game.

PLAYS SAFE GAME

His final match with Manchester was characterized more by consistency than by brilliancy. The boy played the game safe and had it in hand all the way. He was three up on his opponent at the end of eighteen holes and he increased this advantage to five before he had gone much farther, but Manchester started a come-back which cut Buddy's lead to two up as they passed the twenty-seventh hole. This was the closest Manchester came to his opponent after the match was well started.

Despite the gruelling grind of four hard days of golf, the youngster started the final lap of the long race for the championship by picking up three holes in a row to make it five up on Manchester. The next two holes were halved and the match ended on the thirty-second green.

SHOOTS COURSE IN 68

Russell's outstanding exploit of the tournament was his 68 game in which he eliminated Billy Sixty of Milwaukee, 3 and 2. Sixty, with years of tournament experience, was a favorite for the title and few golfers conceded the youngster a chance against the veteran newspaper writer. The boy, however, displayed a brillance which took away the breath of the gallery which followed the match and when the smoke had cleared away the golfing wonder was another step nearer the state title.

He followed this thrillery with a 19-hole battle with Irving Peterson, Racine, who had just eliminated Ned Allis, the defending state champion. Peterson's tremendous drives and his magic putter are enough to disconcert even the most experienced tournament golfer but they never fazed the boy and he went at his game with the same calm and businesslike precision that characterized all his previous rounds. Peterson gave him a terrific fight and carried him to the nineteenth hole. Two more evenly matched golf players never before competed for a state championship in Wisconsin.

MANCHESTER SECOND BEST

Manchester, who previously had eliminated George Dawson of the Blue Mound club in Milwaukee, is an excellent golfer, but he lacks the finish and the precision of the young champion. He played some brilliant shots but every now and then he slipped and when he slipped the consistent golf of the young titleist asserted itself. It wasn't so much Russell's brilliancy that won the title as his uncanny ability to keep going under all conditions and to take advantage of every break his opponent made.

Fully 500 people were in the gallery when the championship match ended. The gallery seemed to grow with each succeeding hole. Even when the match started about 10 o'clock in the morning a big crowd had gathered around the first tee.

Buddy's first drive down the puzzling first fairway was a whistler that carried almost 300 feet to the base of the green, and his second shot was a pitch fifteen feet from the pin. His first putt was three inches short and he holed out in par 4.

Manchester's drive landed on a high bank, flanking the fairway, a tough lie, from which he played out well, but his iron shot struck the edge of the green and rolled back. Then he chipped up ten feet from the pin and sank the putt for a 4, halving the hole.

BUDDY WINS THIRD

On the second their drives were both good and both pitched on the green with their seconds, Manchester twelve feet from the pin, Buddy six feet farther away. Each took two putts and they were still all square.

Par golf gave Buddy the 360-yard third, four strokes to five. His drive went 325 yards, his pitch landing twelve feet from the cup—then the regular two putts. Manchester made a great effort for a half when, after being in trouble, his six foot putt for a four rimmed the cup.

Buddy was now one up, but it was not to be as easy as many thought. They halved the long "dog leg" fourth, when Buddy, who had outshot his opponent, was almost down with his fifteen foot putt. Both got fives. Both played the 155-yard fifth in par three, though Russell barely missed holing his approach putt.

RUSSELL TAKES 7

The sixth, just about the toughest hole on the course, found both in trouble. Trees line the fairway on both sides and they stand just right to catch a slightly hooked tee shot. Both drove into the grove but Manchester made the better recovery, getting his second out and just to the opposite side of the fairway. Buddy's second also hit a tree, and his third, though it got him out, only went about thirty-five yards. Manchester sliced his third neatly around a tree and almost to the green, missing his par 5 when he jumped the cup with his second putt, Buddy taking a 7.

Par golf by both on the seventh and eighth kept them all square but Buddy won the ninth by a beautiful birdie 3. He drove over 200 yards on this 365 yard hole, laid his iron shot six feet from the cup and sank the putt, Manchester getting a 4 after being in poor shape on both his first and second shots, leaving Buddy one up at the turn.

They halved the tenth by sound par 4's, but a 30 foot putt gave Buddy a birdie on the eleventh, and made his margin 2 up, but he was in the creek on the next one, costing him a stroke and the hole. Both took 5's on the thirteenth but perfect golf on the fourteenth, gave Buddy the hole, 4 to 5, and brought his margin to 3 up. Manchester's second hit a tree on this one and he recovered from that jolt with a beautiful pitch to within six feet of the cup but he missed his chance to halve the hole when his first putt barely curved around the rim of the cup.

18TH TO MANCHESTER

They halved the next two by perfect golf, but Buddy added one to his margin on the 120-yard sixteenth, laying his tee shot thirty feet from the cup for a certain three. Manchester was thirty feet beyond the green. His pitch back was far too hard and carried him into a sand trap. When his efforts to recover from this disaster barely reached the green, he picked up, conceding the hole, which left Buddy four up.

Manchester won the eighteenth, 5 to 6, cutting Russell's lead to the three up for the morning round, and at this stage that looked like a winning margin, as it later proved.

Starting the afternoon play with a par 4, Buddy raised his lead to 4 up. They halved the 325 yard twentieth in par 4, but Buddy again raised his lead to 5 up on the next one with a perfect par 4, Manchester's first putt being a weak one, eight feet short.

Buddy needed to sink a four foot putt to win the next, but missed it and both took 5s for a half, also halving the short twenty-third with par 3s. Manchester won the long twenty-fourth with a birdie 4 when he sank a twenty foot putt, Buddy needing a five though he made a great recovery when his third pitched into a grove of trees.

BUDDY WINS THREE

Buddy missed a four foot putt on the next and was leading by only 3 up. They halved the twenty-sixth with par 4s, then Manchester made a gallant bid, taking the twenty-seventh with a par 4, which left Buddy leading by only 2 up. That was the closest Manchester got, but it never flurried the iron nerved Buddy, who came right back with a beautiful succession of three winning holes. He sank an eight footer to win the twenty-eight, got out of a sand trap with a sensational shot to within four feet of the pin on the twenty-ninth, sinking the putt, and took the 130-yard thirtieth with an iron to the green, and two putts. They went to the thirty-second with Buddy 5 up and needing only a half to clinch the match.

This is a 475 yard hole with the green trapped by a creek. Buddy drove straight down the fairway and pitched on the green 15 feet from the cup. Manchester's drive sliced into the rough but he made a beautiful recovery and his ball landed on the green about eight feet from the cup. He had to sink a birdie to prolong the match and when he missed his first putt, after Russell's approach putt was a foot from the pin, he shook hands with Russell and congratulated him as the new champion.

Three Castoffs Supply Batting Punch Of Cubs

BY BILLY EVANS

"Power-House Baseball" is the way major league players now refer to the style of play so popular. It is just their way of saying brute strength dominates the game.

In the sensational rise of the Chicago Cubs to the top of the National League standing three castoffs have supplied the power-house methods which, combined with air-tight pitching, have made the Cubs a strong contender from the start.

The Cubs, by the way, are a most unusual ball club. Of the four clubs conceded to have a chance in the National League, it is the lightest hitting aggregation.

Incidentally, the three players who have furnished a goodly portion of the offense, Outfielders Wilson, Webb ad Stephenson, have been turned adrift by other major league clubs as lacking big league class.

Just to give some idea of the relative difference in batting between Pirates as a team were batting .322 while the mark of the Cubs was 51 points less, or .271.

Outfielders Wilson and Webb, who were both turned down by no less an authority than John McGraw, have contributed the home-run punch that has put the Cubs over in a number of close games. In the first 72 games Wilson hit 18 homers to lead the league while Webb made 12 in the same number of games.

While Riggs Stephenson, who formerly played with the Cleveland Indians, has made only two home runs, he excels at the bat for the Cubs with a mark of .338, further proof of the fact that other things aside from power-house baseball have kept the Cubs in the running.

Any critics who insisted the Chicago Cubs form a great ball club would be tempting fate and courting plenty of criticism, yet it would cause no great surprise in National League quarters if it won the pennant in that organization.

There are no outstanding stars on the club outside of Pitcher Charley Root. The team is just a combination of capable performers who are giving their best efforts at all times.

A Chicago victory in the National League would be extremely popular, since it is nine years since the Cubs won a National League pennant.

Should the Yankees win the American and Chicago in the National, it would provide a highly colorful series between the two big cities of the country and supply the customary intersectional rivalry between the east and west.

The last New York-Chicago world series was staged in 1917, when the Giants represented the National and the White Sox the American, the latter winning the title.

SATURDAY GAME
Oshkosh at Kimberly.

When Kimberly's heavy sluggers, who have placed the village squad in the Fox River Valley League lead and held it there, face Appleton here Sunday afternoon in the third loop struggle of the year between the ancient rivals, they may be faced with a left-handed heaver. Hans Boyle is the man and his work in the 'minors" around Appleton this year has caused his recall to a team that could use a lefthander. Last year Boyle was as good as any hurler in the loop and better than many while his control was right, but he had the southpaw's proverbial wildness. This year he has worked it out in the smaller loops and reports on his record show a low number of walks for a lefty. With his control regained he will be dangerous to any team.

Then there is Dats Crowe whose slow ball bothered Kimberly last year, waiting for a chance; Reffke, another old Kimberly jinx and Sternagle, at present the ace of the staff.

Kimberly's mound choice is as uncertain as Appleton's as the redoubtable Pocan is slated to hurl against Oshkosh Saturday afternoon. Sunday must see either Roehrick, Len Smith or Vanderloop on the hill and the best possibility here seems to be the first-named, though Len hurled pretty ball a week ago against Menasha. Roehrick's fancy heaves may bother Appleton, but Smith took a drubbing from a weaker Appleton batting order than the present one last year and Vanderloop wouldn't last a full game.

4 STAR SPRINTERS ON ONE TRACK TEAM

Southern California Mentor Is Well Supplied With Crack Dash Men

If a college track coach has one outstanding sprinter he is usually more than satisfied. Not so Dean Cromwell of Southern California, who had not less than four this past season.

Since three men are all any team can enter in a single event, Cromwell was well supplied with reserve power. Despite the many injuries sprinters suffer, Cromwell was always able to muster three of his stars.

Here is the sprinting lineup that Coach Cromwell inspected prior to each meet: Charles Borah, national champion; Captain Ed House, Pacific Coast dual meet champion last season; Herschel Smith, former national junior champion, and Weldon Draper, a consistent 9.8 seconds man.

Borah, of course, is the ace of Cromwell's sprint quartet, but there is so little difference in the relative ability of all four, that any one of them has a chance to go over winner.

While the above array of speedsters would delight the heart of any college coach, Cromwell rises to remark that Bert Darling, the star freshman, will join the varsity squad next year and make some of the veterans step to retain their laurels.

DIEGEL STILL LEADS RIVALS BY 2 STROKES

Toronto, Ont. —(AP)—The twentieth annual Canadian Open Golf championship was down for settlement Saturday with Leo Diegel of Mount Vernon, N. Y., maintaining a two stroke advantage on his closest competitors to regain the title which he held in 1924 and 1925.

By virtue of a 74 Friday on top of his record-breaking 68 of Thursday, Diegel has a total of 142 at the halfway mark while Walter Hagen of Detroit and Johnny Farrell of Mount Vernon trail at 144. Hagen's 71, two under par, enabled him to jump ahead of several of the leaders.

Al Watrous of Grand Rapids and Tommy Armour of Washington were tied for fourth and Willie McFarlane of Tuckahoe, N. Y., was sixth.

BOBBY OSHMAN SHINES

Bill Tilden has named Bobby Oshman as one of the coming junior stars of America. Young Oshman lived up to their prediction by recently winning the Brooklyn junior singles crown.

Toronto—Larry Gains, Toronto, defeated King Solomon, Panama (1.)

Shall Rev. William M. La Mance, Methodist evangelist of Mt. Vernon, Ill., make of his son, Billy, a boxer or a preacher? The fight racket has Billy for the present as Billy, Centre College student and A. A. U. light heavyweight champion of the Ohio Valley Conference, trains for fights this month. Rev. La Mance has been in Billy's corner at every fight, and is now using Eddie Speer, a middleweight, to get Billy in shape for his fights.

(Final Games of Season, All Postponed Games

Lautenschlager hurled the Brandt Co. team of the City Twilight Softball League to a 7-4 victory over the weakened Civic club squad Friday afternoon at Jones park to complete the regular playing season of the league. Connelly worked for the losers.

Three postponed games wend the loop schedule next week and on the results of two of the games hinge the pennant for 1927. The game Tuesday is between the Brandts Co. and it means little to either team. The Brandts may end the season in a tie for third, third or even second by a win, depending upon the other two games, but all the Guardsman can do is stay ahead of the P-C men in sixth. A loss for C. D will tie that squad and the newspaper boys. The Brandts can take a tie for third if the Badgers win, third alone if the Badgers lose, and a second-place tie if the Legion loses, provided they win.

Monday and Wednesday will be the important games. Monday the second-place Legion squad meets the Civics and should take an easy win. A win for the Soldiers will give them a chance for a tie for first and the banner. The chance depends on Wednesday's game between the Interlakes, now in first and the Badger Printers, the season's finale. An Interlake loss will give the Legion a first-place tie and give the Badgers third in the standings. Because of these facts and the uncertainty as to who will be the 1927 champ, the games next week are expected to draw plenty of fans.

The Monday game between the Legion and Civics will be staged at Brandt park instead of Jones park. In case of a title tie, the Legion and Interlakes probably will play a three-game series to decide the banner.

The Legion collected eleven hits while the Villagers had seven.

CRACK GOLFERS OF STATE ENTHUSED OVER LOCAL COURSE

New Champion, Runnerup Class Links as "Real Test", "Fine Modern Course"

"A real test of golf," and "a splendid modern course" is the way dozens of visiting golfers described Butte des Morts golf course during the Wisconson amateur tournament here this last week. While there was some sound abuse of some of the holes by luckless golfers who found the going pretty hard there was a general unanimity of opinion that Butte des Morts is one of the best golf courses in the state. They were agreed that there is none prettier in the state.

"You've got to pop them straight on this course" Buddy Russell, the new state champion commented after his championship match. "The rough around the greens is worse than sand traps and the golfer who gets off the fairway is due for a lot of trouble. I enjoyed playing on Butte des Morts course but it is a real test of golf."

"It's a regular course," is the way it was described by Morgan Manchester, Madison, runner up. "It's a real tough proposition and calls for good golf. The rough around the green isn't so bad after you get used to it. I never figured I had a hole won when my opponent got into the high grass."

George Downer, Milwaukee sports writer, familiar with practically all the golf courses in the state, said it was a splendid modern course that tests anyone's golf. The narrow fairways and rolling ground furnish real difficulties, he said.

CUBS GAIN ANOTHER GAME IN FLAG RACE

Jones Makes It 3 Straight Over Braves as Ol' Cy Williams Beats Bucs

Chicago could regard her Cubs jubilantly Saturday as they apparently had picked up the right trail to treeing the National League pennant.

Six consecutive victories, three in a clean sweep over the flashy Braves, pushed the Bruins in front by two full games.

Percy Jones polished off the Boston warriors by a 5 to 2 verdict before a ladies' day crowd totalling some 32,000. Jones held the Braves to eight hits and led the Chicago attack with four hits.

Cy Williams went a long ways in wrecking the Pirates by lashing out a homer, a triple, a double and a single in four official times at bat, as the Phillies hung up a 9 to 7 victory.

Adolfo Luque, Cincinnati's Cuban hurler, had the Giants helpless while the Reds finished in front by 3 to 0.

Brooklyn concluded a stay at St. Louis by trouncing the Cardinals, 5 to 2, giving the Robins the series by two to one.

Babe Ruth knocked out his 35th circuit clout as the Yankees whipped Detroit into submission 5-2.

The Senators waded through 17 hits donated by St. Louis hurlers for a 17 to 8 triumph.

Carrigan's Red Sox stopped the Pale Hose by 4 to 1 for their fourth straight verdict. The Indians fray at Philadelphia was washed out by rain.

TWO FORMER FINALISTS IN GOLF TITLE BATTLE

Cleveland, Ohio —(AP)— Two former finalists unsheathed their mashies Saturday to seek the national public links golf title in the 36-hole finals at Ridgewood club.

They were Carl Kauffman of Pittsburgh, who lost in the finals last year at Buffalo to Lester Bolstad of Minneapolis, and William Serrick of New York, who yielded to Ray McAuliffe of Buffalo, at New York two years ago.

Both were at the top of their game. Kauffman scored three under par in eliminating J. R. Miller of Washington and close to perfect figures in ousting Robert Wingate of Florida Friday and Serrick playing virtually as well. Serrick shot five above par in eliminating B. R. Burrows of Washington 2 to 0, but he was one stroke sub par later in downing Kendall Morrison of St. Joseph, Mo., five and four.

Kauffman was a slight favorite as he qualified with 150 strokes for second place while Serrick barely got in with 160.

CUBS WILL USE OWN STADIUM FOR WORLD SERIES BATTLES—IF

Chicago —(AP)— Not to count his chickens before they are hatched, but merely for the purpose of satisfying hundreds of Chicagoans, who have made inquiry, William Veeck, president of the Chicago Cubs, has announced that Wrigley field will be the scene of part of the next world series, should a National league pennant come to Chicago.

The park of the White Sox would accommodate a larger crowd, but Veeck said that notwithstanding this fact, the Cubs would use their own park—if.

STATE GOLF HEADS SAY 1927 TOURNEY WAS HUGE SUCCESS

President Hadfield, Secretary Tyrell Well Pleased With Appleton Meet

"The 1927 Wisconsin State Amateur Golf tournament was the most representative meet ever conducted by the state association," Harry S. Hadfield, president of the state association said in a brief address which preceded the awarding of prizes at the conclusion of the state meet here Friday afternoon. "The entry list was about the largest in history with about 240 entered and every club in the state was represented. There were more golfers from northeastern Wisconsin than in any previous meet."

PRAISE COURSE, COOPERATION

"Butte des Mort club officials cooperated to the limit of their ability to make the tournament the huge success it was. When it was suggested that the tournament be played on the young Butte des Morts course I was skeptical but now I am exceedingly glad we came to Appleton. I am sure I voice the feeling of all the golfers that it was a splendid tournament played on an excellent course."

Henry Tyrell, Milwaukee, secretary of the state association, was profuse in his praise of the course and his expression of gratitude to the Appleton men who had helped make the tournament a success. He particularly mentioned H. H. Pelkey, D. P. Steinberg and Paul Wesco as having contributed liberaly of time and effort to the state meet.

The prizes were presented immediatly after the championship match. Between three and four hundred persons gathered around the official tent from which President Hadfield called the names of the winners and gave the prizes.

AWARD MANY PRIZES

The new state champion, J. A. (Buddy) Russell, received the huge cup emblematic of the state title which will be retained by his club until next year and his personal prizes were a gold medal and a solid silver tea service. A silver cup was awarded Morgan Manchester, runner up. Dozens of prizes ranging all the way from silver percolators and thermos jars to comb and brush sets and a cane were awarded to winners and runnersup in the various events. Every winner received a gold medal emblematic of his victory and announcement was made that prizes are to be given to all the 32 men who qualified in the championship flight. This is the first year this was done. Announcement was made that prizes for the qualifiers will be mailed or delivered to them.

Playing with Miss Kea Bouman of Holland, Mrs. Mallory Friday scored a straight set victory over Mrs. Charlotte Chapin and Miss Margaret Blake of Boston to win the women's doubles.

Mrs. Mallory and Tilden were beaten in the semi-finals of the mixed doubles by Mrs. A. H. Chapin, Jr., and Arnold W. Jones of Providence.

The final in doubles will bring the Mrs. Chapin-Jones team against Miss Blake and Lewis N. White of Austin, Texas.

HOLD WRESTLING MATCH AT WAVERLY SATURDAY

Two evenings of wrestling will be staged at Waverly beach Saturday and Sunday when Emil Boldero, a light heavyweight, will challange any man in the vicinity to stick with him for ten minutes. The local matman is a tough performer and last week at Little Chute he took the measure of the carnival wrestler there with ease.

Three Yankee Players Crowd Idle Al Simmons For Bat Lead In A. L.

Bucs Trio Still Lead in N. L.; Ossie Orwoll Returns to Association Top

Chicago—(AP)—The American League now has a hard hitting trio like the three Pittsburgers of the National league but the three Yankees lack one step of being at the top of the batting column. Al Simmons of the Athletics sits serenely on the throne there, though he has been on the bench the past week.

Right behind his chair, though, are Lou Gehrig, Babe Ruth and Bob Meusel, a first baseman and two outfielders, the same as the Pirate trio of old Joe Harris, Paul Waner and Clyde Barnhart.

Meusel joined his two mates in averages compiled Saturday including Wednesday's games, with a great hitting rally which ran his percentage from .363 to .371, eleven hits in six games. Earl Combs doubled Meusel's gain to make the fourth Yankee in the first ten batsmen, displacing Johnny Neun, the Detroit first sacker.

Still sliding, Ty Cobb who a month ago was in the first ten, Saturday is down in twenty-second place, but Tris Speaker still hangs around in fifth. The Detroit pair, Harry Heilmann and Bob Fathergill, who used to be battling for leadership, also are still in the first ten but well down the list.

George Sisler is still waiting for an opportune vacancy among the leaders, but meanwhile continues to add to his stolen base string which now totals 20. Neun has displaced his teammate, Tavenor, as runnerup, with 18, a gain of two.

Lou Gehrig is only two home runs behind Babe Ruth's pace in the 1921 record year and led Babe by three on Wednesday night. Lou had 37 and Babe 34.

With all the New York batting power behind him, Waite Hoyt still holds the leadership of the regular moundsmen of the league with a mark of 14 victories to four defeats. Ted Lyons of the White Sox has the most wins, 17, but is charged with 8 defeats.

Leading American League batters: Simmons, Philadelphia .394; Gehrig, New York, .387; Ruth, New York, .373; Meusel, New York, .371; Speaker, Washington, .369; E. Miller, St. Louis, .369; Heilmann, Detroit, .367; Schang, St. Louis, .364; Fathergill, Detroit, .354.

Frankie Frisch, who broke up the Pirate trio at the head of the National League's batting list three weeks ago, threatens to do it again. He was the only one of the leaders, with the exception of Harvey Hendricks of Brooklyn, to make an outstanding gain in percentage, in Saturday's figures. He is but one point behind Clyde Barnhart, the trailing member of the Pirate trio.

Hendricks, who held a middle seat in the first ten for several weeks, a month ago and then dropped out, returned to his accustomed sport Saturday displacing Eddie Farrell of the Braves.

The Fordham flash, as they used to call Frisch in New York before he was traded to St. Louis, didn't steal any bases this week but his mark of 31 is a dozen higher than the former base stealing leader, Kiki Cuyler of Pittsburg.

The home run honors of the elder league still rest upon the brow of old Cy Williams. He would have had one more than his mark of 22 if the hickory hadn't given way in a game against the Cubs. When the bat broke, the ball, instead of sailing out into the bleachers, dropped weakly back of the infield. Cy had 22 Wednesday.

Rogers Hornsby, the crown prince of the Giant squad, was the first National Leaguer to cross the century mark in runs with Frisch close behind him. Gehrig turned the trick in the American League two weeks ago, and Paul Waner, the Pirate star, was just on the threshold Wednesday night, with 99 runs.

Rube Benton, on the Giants' successful western tour, slipped in between Lee Meadows and Carmen Hill, the two Pittsburg pitchers who have been sharing the league honors and Hill dropped to third. Meadows leads the regulars with 14 victories and 5 losses, Charley Root of the Cubs has 18 victories but 9 defeats.

OSSIE BACK ON TOP

The Brewers' all-around star, Oscar Orwell, is back in first place among the American Association's batters, Saturday through his pinch hitting success. Reb Russell, last week's leader, increased his batting pace, but not enough to hold the honor post.

All the other leaders shed a few percentage points and Ollie Tucker, the Millers' new outfielder, finally slumped clear out of the first ten. Hauser, the Blues' first baseman, displaced him Saturday. Another famous hitter is following in Tucker's footsteps, Dewitt Lebourveau of the Hens.

Right after Bevo was reported sold to the Philadelphia Athletics, for delivery after the Association season, his stick work grew uncertain and Saturday he is barely holding on to tenth place after a brilliant start this season.

The Millers' slugging shortstop, Frank Emmer, has been performing true to form, though, and his home run string now records 19. Earl Smith, another Millers, a fly chaser, failed to connect this week as he was on the bench and others are creeping close to his mark of 16.

Among his other chores Orwoll won one game on the hill for the Brewers, but got charged with two defeats so Zinn passed him in ranking among the regulars. Palmero, the Cuban finger of the Mudhens, has a mark of eight victories and but one defeat to top the list, but Zinn has 15 victories to his credit with only 6 losses. Sheehan, another Blue finger, is the only one to top Zinn total of victories, but Sheehan's sixteen wins are offset by eight setbacks.

Leading batters of the American association: Orwoll, Milwaukee, .395; Russell, Indianapolis, .392; Grimes, Toledo .385; Kirkham, Columbus, .370; Veach, Toledo, .368; Duncan, Minneapolis, .364; Riconda, Milwaukee, .362; Funk, St. Paul, .360; Hauser, Kansas City, .359; Lebourveau, Toledo, 354.

OSHKOSH BOAT TAKES FIRST IN YACHT RACE

Pewaukee, Wis. —(AP)— The Hope, skippered by Ed Lehr of Oshkosh, won the Burroughs trophy event at the Pewaukee invitation regatta Friday. It was the only event on the program which was completed. Light winds in the morning prevented the yachts in the Oakton Country club cup race from finishing within the time limit.

The Hope went the eightmile course in 2:15. Two minutes behind were Never Mind, Pewaukee and The Wow'O Lake Geneva, tied for second.

Morning and afternoon races are scheduled for Saturday for the Waukesha Beach and Eagles trophies.

LATE SPURT OF REDS PROVES CLASS TELLS

Cincinnati—There's an old, old saying that class will tell eventually.

That saying is being proved these days by the belated spurt of the Cincinnati Reds in the National League.

After floundering around at the bottom of the league for weeks, the Reds are now at the top of the second division and are making a valiant fight to land in the first division.

Their infield settled at last, their outfield working well, their pitchers going as everyone expected them to do when the season opened, the Reds are being hailed by many experts as the best team in the league outside of the Pirates.

JACK LOCKWILL IN THE WOODS

Tom McNally, Lockwill's former enemy at Rockdale Academy, who had become his staunch friend, was frying bacon over a fire before a small tent in the woods when Jack reappeared, followed by Darling, Bambi, and Garabaldi. The sight of them, coming forth from the woods in which the evening shadows were deepening, astonished McNally. "A bear!" he shouted, staring.

The girl made the bear's chain fast to a small, stout tree while Willie and Jack told McNally what had happened. "That means trouble for us," said Tom.

"Oh, that jaynawker was too scared to come back here tonight," declared Darling, proudly touring the trout from the creel. "Here's our supper."

Jack cooked the trout himself. The still hungry bear was fed, and the little party was sitting around a strip of canvas spread on the ground to serve for a tablecloth, when a wild-looking, bareheaded man came crashing out of the dark woods, jabbering excitedly. "Here's the trouble I predicted!" exclaimed McNally, seizing a stout cudgel and leaping to his feet, ready for battle.

COMMITS SUICIDE AT NEW LONDON BY DOSE OF DEADLY POISON

Third Man to Kill Self in This Vicinity in Last Week.

New London—The third suicide in this city within a week occurred about 3:15 Friday afternoon when Cole Sloan, 37, died as the result of drinking bichloride of mercury. Despondency over the death of his wife, Lila Reed Sloan, who died at her home in Milwaukee on June 14, is believed to have been the cause for the act. Mr. Sloan had threatened continually since the death of his wife, to take his life. He arrived at Milwaukee Wednesday after a month's stay at the hospital for World War veterans at Dayton, Ohio. Packing his personal belongings, he came to this city Friday morning, going to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Huebner. The latter is a sister of Mrs. Sloan, and from whose home Mrs. Sloan was buried.

In the afternoon he accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Huebner down town leaving them at 1:30. He returned to the Huebner home where their 12-year-old son, Russell, and a baby were alone. Going into the dining room he penned a note addressed to Mr. and Mrs. Huebner and his brother, Charles Sloan, of Cloquet, Minn. This note expressed a desire to be burried beside the grave of his wife by the American legion of which he was a member. Russell went into the dining room in time to see Sloan drink the poison from a glass and step outside on the rear porch. At this moment Mr. and Mrs. Huebner arrived and rushed to the scene and found Mr. Sloan dead. A physician was summoned who said death was almost instantaneous. Evidence showed that the poison had been purchased at a Milwaukee drug store. The body was taken to the Pommerening and Cline Funeral parlors where it will be kept awaiting the arrival of relatives.

The Automobile With The Quickest Pick-Up

Different automobile salesmen like to brag about the quick "pick up" of the make of car they are selling—but right here and now we can tell them which car has the very quickest "pick-up" of all.

It's the one that is advertised in the "Automobiles for Sale" column of the Post-Crescent A-B-C Classified Section.

MEN AND WOMEN SWIMMERS BACK AT FRENCH CAPE

Channel Crossing Aspirants at Griz Nez Confident of Success

Cape Gris Nez, France—They're at it again over here. Trailing thermometers in the water, checking tides, testing currents and feeling the air as only a channel cookoo can do. And on the sands the talk is the same as it has been for the last dozen seasons—channel swimming.

Although Gertrude Ederle was supposed to have kicked most of the romance out of the sport, the song of the chanel siren still is heard by long distance swimmers of all descriptions. Representatives of England and Egypt already are on the job, and swimmers of France, Germany, Belgium and Denmark are expected as soon as the weather clears.

FOR KING FUAD'S SAKE

Ishak Helmy, the Egyptian, is back for his third year. He says he is in perfect condition, down to 252 pounds in weight, and completely cured of the stomach trouble which undermined his strength last year and forced him to abandon his two attempts. He is determined to swim the channel for the sake of King Fuad, who is interested in Helmy and has expressed a wish for him to succeed in order to stir up interest in athletics in Egypt.

Frank Perks, the Birmingham mechanic and another veteran seasoned in channel failures, again is in training at Dover. Otherwise the chief aspirants this year are women. Tough as the channel is they are out to beat the Ederle records of 14 hours and a half.

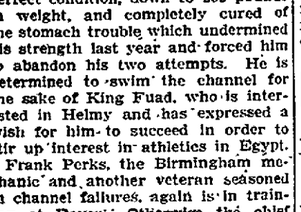

The News of the World offer of $5,000 for the British woman who will break this record has stimulated great interest among English girl swimmers. One of the foremost is a newcomer, Miss Hilda Harding of Brighton, who is training here. She is eighteen and built very much like Gertrude Ederle, though shorter and about twenty pounds lighter. Others already in the race are Miss Mollie Hudson, a London diver, Miss Connie Jeans of Nottingham, Mrs. Jack Weidman, wife of the veteran trainer who died last year, Miss Jane Darwin, called the "mystery woman" because she tries to conceal her real name and activities, Dr. Nora MacClellan and Miss Mercedes Gleitze. So far these have been doing their training in England.

The best woman swimmer on the job is Mrs. Mille Corson, the American who last year succeeded after Miss Ederle and in slightly longer time.

THE OTHER DIRECTION

She swam from Gris Nez to Dover and now wants to swim from the English to the French coast, which is a harder job owing to the peculiar twists of the tides.

Edith Jensen of Denmark says she is coming to Gris Nez as soon as the weather is favorable for swimming.

The weather, however, has been most discouraging so far. The water in the channel is much colder than usual at this time of year, and this section of France has had practically no summer yet. Last year Miss Ederle swam across on August 6, but it will probably be much later before any serious attempts can be made this year.

Helmy and Miss Harding are training under Jabez Wolffe.

GERMAN BISHOPS RAP ALCOHOLIC ABUSE

Berlin —(AP)— A scathing censure of prevailing alcoholic abuses is contained in a pastoral which the bishops at conference in Fulda caused to be read from the pulpits of all Catholic churches in Germany recently.

In strong language the letter sets forth that fabulous sums are daily being squandered for alcoholic debauches and that alcohol has come to dominate all public festivities, club meetings, family parties, and even simpler forms of amusement on the Sabbath, and has frequently led to violent excesses. It points out that "form all parts of Germany and all social spheres complaints are increasing about the rapid spread of the alcohol habit. In recently published statistics on the startling increase of alcoholism a forecast must be seen of a life of misery for the masses."

Issue 20 Permits

Twenty-building permits totaling $44,400 were issued by the city building inspector the first week in August. Residences permits aggregated $38,000.

SLICK BUSINESS

Elizabeth, N. J.—Pat Mitchell negro is skinning himself into a fortune. He is the fastest skinner of catfish in the world, he says; at least, he is earning from $25 to $47 a day at his trade. Catching catfish is an important industry here and the workers are paid by the number of fish they handle.

Certain Eskimo tribes kill and bury a dog with each child that dies. This is done so the dog may guide the child to the other world.

in the business district and paced elevated platforms.

While no alarm was felt at the summer White House near Rapid City, three soldiers have been stationed at the rear of the game lodge and the entire detail entrusted with protecting the presidential family is on the alert night and day.

All active policemen were called out in both New York and Boston to be ready for an emergency. Public buildings and homes of prominent officials were being guarded in both cities. Policemen are required to stay at stations during rest periods.

In Chicago 20 operatives of the department of justice and secret service were thrown about the federal building with orders to "shoot first and ask questions afterward" as the result of threats to bomb the building, officials said.

The Catholic church of Saints Peter and Paul in the Latin quarter of San Francisco, five times the object of bombers was under police guard.

The Berlin police Saturday took additional precautions to safeguard American officials and buildings here from possible disturbance by Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers.

In Moscow the torrent of resolutions against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti is increasing in volume daily.

One hundred and seventy meetings, attended by 100,000 workers are said to have been held yesterday and last night in Moscow. A central protest meeting has been called for Saturday evening.

Injuries Are Fatal to Arthur Maldewin, Who Was Struck by Motor Truck

Arthur Maldewin, 25-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Maldewin, Hortonia, died in a Milwaukee hospital Saturday morning from injuries received when he was struck by a motor truck on Highway 74 near Brown Deer, eight miles north of Milwaukee Thursday afternoon. The young man was alighting from his own automobile, which he had parked on the side of the road, when the truck crashed into it and crushed him.

Survivors are his parents, one brother, Arnold, Dortonia, five sisters, Mrs. Isaac Bolonga, Kaukauna; Mrs Steinberg, Hortonia; Mrs. Charles Schessow, Wausau; Misses Edna and Dora, Hortonia.

The body is to be brought to Hortonville Saturday night.

LEVINE'S PLANE HELD AT DROUHIN'S REQUEST

Paris — (AP) — Charles A. Levine's trans-Atlantic monoplane, Columbia, was practically sequestered Saturday afternoon upon the formal demand of Maurice Drouhin's lawyers when Levine directed a fourth attempt to get possession of the plane's extra motor and cart it off.

Levine sent a truck to Le Bourget field with men to get the motor and other spare parts twice Friday but friends of Drouhin interfered and Saturday morning the French pilot himself blocked another effort.

When Levine went with a crew to get the motor late Saturday afternoon, M. Barrault, French member of the firm of Beach and Barrault, Drouhin's attorneys stepped in.

Shooting Stars Common During Month Of August

BY ROBERT H. BAKER
Professor of Astronomy, University of Illinois

Urbana, Ill.—(AP)—August is the best time to look for "shooting stars."

During this month the Perseids or August meteors put on their annual display. It will not be a brilliant spectacle, but if the sky is watched attentively for a few minutes on a clear evening when the moon is not too bright, one or several Perseids will probably appear.

Meteors are stony and metallic fragments of unknown origin. Most of them are no larger than the head of a pin. They travel in great swarms around the sun in elongated orbits like those of comets.

Ordinarily they are invisible. But whenever a swarm encounters the earth the meteors plunge downward through our atmosphere, are heated intensely by friction with it and are consumed by their own fury before they can reach the ground. Each luminous streak that we call a shooting star marks the annihilation of a celestial bullet.

Protected as we are by the atmosphere, we do not often think of the deadly bombardment going on overhead. At least 20,000,000 meteors collide with the earth every day, striking with the average speed of 26 miles a second. Imaginative authors who write of voyages to the moon often fail to take into account this hazard to any expeditin outside the protecting blanket of our atmosphere.

The Perseids which appear in August are so named because they seem to come from a point in the constellation Perseus. It is an illusion. Just as the rails of a track appear to converge in the distance, so the meteors apparently radiate from a point. Actually they move in parallel paths.

Perseus rises in the northeast at 11 P. M. on August 1 at 10 o'clock on the 15th and at 9 near the end of the month. This constellation appears in the Milky Way as a great arrow of stars pointing upward to Cassiopeia's Chair. Its most notable star is Agol, the winking Demon Star.

The path of the August meteors is a long ellipse which stretches from the earth's orbit far out beyond the planet Neptune. The members of the swarm are well scattered around the orbit. Consequently it is safe to predict a shower of meteors whenever the earth crosses this orbit, which occurs always in August.

Some meteor swarms are so compact that, although we cross their paths annually, they produce showers at longer intervals. Of this kind is the Leonid swarm, which caused the spectacular showers of 1833 and 1866.

Occasionally the earth encounters a meteor so much larger than usual that it is only partly consumed in its flight through the air and falls to the ground. The largest known example is the great iron meteorite in the Natural History Museum in New York. It weighs 36 tons. A much greater one is supposed to lie under the edge of Meteor Crater in Arizona. Fortunately for us, the very large meteors are rare.

FLIERS PREPARE FOR RACE ACROSS PACIFIC

Two of 15 Planes Entered Damaged in Test Flights Friday

San Francisco—(AP)—Two of the 15 planes entered in the forthcoming James D. Dole $35,000 air race from the North American mainland to Honolulu Saturday were undergoing repairs as the result of test flight accidents which for a time led to belief that the fliers were lost.

One plane was that which Miss Mildred Doran, school teacher and John A. Pedlar, both of Flint, Mich., have entered in the race and the other that entered by Fred Burgh of Honolulu, and which Lieutenants George Covell and Leo Pawlikowski expect to fly.

Miss Doran and Pedlar were forced to land a few miles west of Mendota, Calif., on a flight from Santa Monica to San Francisco, about 500 miles when a spark plug gave trouble. They fixed the spark plug, but broke the under carriage in taking off a second time.

The Burgh monoplane, flown by Otto Shafter and William Tremoine, on a test flight from Los Angeles to San Diego, arrived in San Diego Friday night after two halts which caused it to be reported lost twice.

The plane of Al Henley and Bennett Griffin of Oklahoma, forced down at Amboy, Calif., Thursday on an attempted non-stop flight from Bartlesville Okla., to San Francisco reached Clover field, Santa Monica, Calif., Friday and halted for temporary repairs.

Major Livingston Irving of Berkeley, Calif., was the first to officially qualify for the race.

With the air derby scheduled to start at noon, Aug. 12, all planes and pilots must be qualified the fore part of next week.

PROPOS EDIVORCE TAX

Paris—France has discovered that it has been overlooking an important source of revenue in the large numbers of divorces granted foreigners who come here to secure them. Paris lawyers have proposed the institution of a heavy tax upon divorces which not only will swel the national coffers, but will decrease the high rate of separations.

GERMAN BUSINESS MEN TO TAKE PART IN U. S. AIR RACE

Wealthy Dealers of "Old Country" Take to Ballooning as Hobby

Berlin —(AP)— Three business men to whom ballooning is a week-end recreation will represent Germany in the Gordon-Bennett balloon races out of Detroit Sep. 2 to 10.

To the three, Fritz Eimermacher, dealer in oils and fats, Dr. R. Halben, oculist, and Hugo Kaulen, merchant and manufacturer, piloting a gas-bag over the countryside is what tennis and golf are to the American business man. Each is more than 40 years old—considerably older than the leading men in other forms of sport in Germany.

Eimermacher, of Munster, Westphalial, is the most traveled to German balloonists and perhaps the most picturesque. He has gone up in his balloons more than 165 times since he began flying in 1909, at the age of 28.

Invited by a friend to accompany him no a balloon trip, he saw in the sport an opportunity for developing personal courage and determination, cleverness and skill. He organized a balloonist's club, and showed his faith in his hobby by taking his honeymoon trip in his craft. His twentieth trip made him victor over 12 competitors. In 1912 he was the only German in the Gordon-Bennett races.

Storms do not scare him. Repeatedly he starts off in a gale, and lands in just as difficult weather. On numerous occasions he has won first, second or third prizes. In the recent races out of Gelsengirchen, which determined Germany's representativs at this year's Gordon-Bennett cup competition he tied with Dr. Halben for firs place.

In 1908, Dr. Halben, Berlin oculist and ophthalmologist, was instructor at the University of Greifswald. Prince Henry of Prussia, the former German emperor's brother, visited the institution. In the course of an automobile drive, Dr. Halben sat next to a captain in the air corps, who so enthused the oculist that he began flying that same year.

Halben specializes in goal flying, that is, in landing his balloon as close as possible to a designated distant goal. He achieved a world record in 1924, when he came within 400 feet of a goal lying 180 miles away from his starting point.

His only mishap was in 1914, when he was caught in a tornado and negotiated a forced landing within 8 minutes from a height of 11,000 feet. His back was injured but the lives of his passengers were saved from the Baltic Sea. His nurse at the hospital tried to exact a promise that he would never go up again. Instead she accompanied him on his first flight after recovery, which also proved his world record trip. He has 82 flights to his credit.

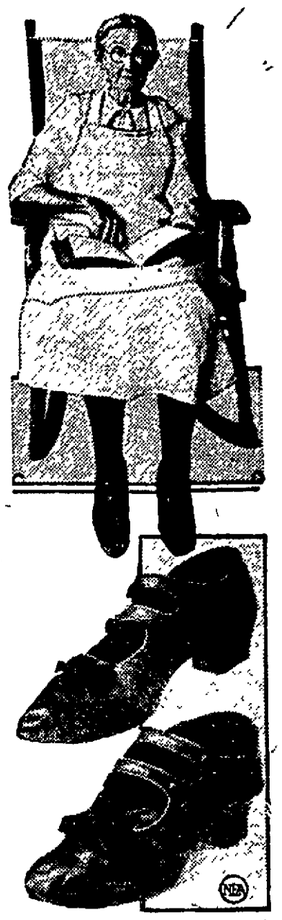

Kaulen, 58 years old, of Barmen, in the Rhinelander, has been an enthusiastic balloonist since 1908. A friend of his, Oscar Erbsloeh, returned from his participation in the Gordon-Bennett races in America in 1907 with enthusiasm for the sport and Kaulen caught the fever. He took third prize at the international balloon races at Oslo in 1912 qualified for the Gordon-Bennett races out of Paris in 1913.

In December, 1913, Kaulen with two passengers set a world's long distance and duration record, covering 1,865 miles in 87 hours. Though another German, Berliner, outdistanced him by 65 miles a few months later, Kaulen still holds the duration record, He has flown his balloon nearly 60 times.

FALLS FROM CANOE AND DROWNS IN LAKE GENEVA

Lake Geneva—(AP)—Mrs. Sarah Deveney, of Chicago, an employe of Mrs. Walter Borden, was drowned Friday, having fallen from a canoe, while attempting to reach the pier at the Borden residence. She was alone at the time. Her cries attracted the attention of others, who came too late to save her. The body will be taken by a sister to Chicago for burial.

AGE SIXTEEN

The high price of shoes is one thing that isn't worrying Grandma Sarah Jane Funderburk of Birmingham, Ala. these days. She bought a pair 16 years ago and she's still wearing them nearly every day, and has had them half-soled only once. The shoes are shown below — slightly worn but still serviceable. They cost three dollars when new.

FOOTBALL APPLICATIONS GO TO 48,000 ALUMNI

Madison —(AP)— More than 48,000 football applications are to be mailed this year to alumni of the University of Wisconsin. The work of addressing these blanks began this week in the office of the alumni recorder. The increase in number represents for the most part the names and addresses of non-graduate alumni which have been added to the files of the alumni records office through tracing operations during the school year.

Approximately 9,000 special application blanks will be sent to members of the Alumni Association and life members of the Memorial Union which will give these alumni first attention in the seating order in the alumni section of the stadium.

REACTIONARIES HAVE CONTROL OF MARKET

General Motors, Mack Trucks and Others Show Losses of Point

New York—(AP)—Mixed price movements characterized the opening of Saturday's stock market, but reactionady tendencies appeared to predominate. Initial losses of a point or so in General Motors, Mack Trucks and Green Cananea Copper contrasted with similar gains in Postum Cereal, Du Pont and Atlantic Refining. Week-end profit taking was again an important factor.

Pools strove valiantly to maintain bullish enthusiasm by marking up their favorites but they encountered stronger opposition than heretofore. Many of the leading commission houses had urged their customers to take profits and maintain a neutral position for the time being, and liquidation from this source undoubtedly accounted for much of the early irregularity. General Motors, Allied Chemical, Rock Island and Illinois Central quickly extended their early losses to 2 points or more and Maryland, Timken Roller Bearing, Westinghouse Airbrake and other recent favorites sagged a point or more under the weight of offerings. On the other hand, White Sewing Machine was marked up nearly 3 points and Union Carbide, Collins and Aikman and International Harvester climbed 2 points or more. Foreign exchanges opened steady except for a further break of 8 points in Spanish pesetas to around 16.35 cents. Demand sterling ruled around $4.85 9-16 and French francs around 3.91½ cents.

MANY REFINEMENTS IN NEW BUICK CAR

Everything Is Conveniently Placed Within Easy Reach of Motorist

In introducing its 16 models for 1928, the Buick Motor Company presents an array of refinements which have seldom, if ever, been equalled, except by Buick.

The improved six-cylinder valve-in-head engine, with the noiseless and vibrationless flow of power which made it the talk of the world last year, the new and captivating bodies by Fisher, the new Buick vogue in interior treatment—these are not only a part of the story. The convenience of driver and passenger has dictated a host of other refinements which will be found in all Buicks for 1928 and in Buicks only.

Everything is conveniently placed, in the new Buick driving compartment. All controls are readily accessible without reaching or leaning. Lights are centralized on the top of the steering post, where a single switch not only regulates them but turns them on and off.

At the junction of the steering post and dash is the new Buick two-way lock, devised as a protection against theft. By means of it, the ignition and the steering wheel may both be locked, but it is ingeniously designed to prevent locking of the wheel by the mere act of shutting off the ignition. The Buick driver may cut off his engine and coast without losing steering control, but he cannot lock the wheel while the engine is running. The new lock is case-hardened and has the full approval of the Board of Underwriters, which means that the car so equipped enjoys the lowest automobile theft insurance rates.

CLOSELY GROUPED

On the Buick dash, which is simplified by transfer of the light controls to the steering post, the instruments are grouped in three handsome small panels, clustered within a larger panel. Ammeter, oil gauge, speedometer, gasoline gauge and water thermometer comprise the group. They occupy a space so small that all can be seen at a single glance.

A small refinement, notable because it typifies Buick's attention to details, is the provision for illuminating the two-way lock. A small switch arm, projecting beneath the dash within easy reach of the driver, enables him to throw the light beam upon the instrument panel, indirectly as heretofore, to divert it to the lock for convenience in locking or unlocking, or to switch the light off entirely.

Driving seats in the five passenger two door sedan of series 115 and the roomy five passenger coupe of series 128 may be moved one inch forward or backward from the central position, by means of a simple adjustment. Still another improvement is the adjustable steering post, which may be raised or lowered to suit the driver's individual requirements.

In deference to the thousands of women who drive Buicks, engineers have originated a steering wheel which will appeal to the small hand, as well as to the large. The new wheel is designed to fill any hand comfortably, making prolonged drives possible without fatigue.

CONCEALED LIGHTS

Several of the new closed models embody an ingenious concealed switch which automatically turns on the dome light when the rear door is opened, without in anyway interfering with control of that light from the usual switch on the side post.

Open models are more luxurious than ever before, and embody many marked improvements. All open models have forward-folding windshields, with heavily nickled posts, automatic cleaners and fittings.

The hinge at which the posts fold forward is cunningly bored and machined, so that when the windshield is erect the post and hinge form an integral part of the airline between windshield cleaner and engine. A spacious tool compartment, which may be locked, is fitted into the left front door of the five passenger sport tourin gcar.

HARDWARE ON AUTOS WORTHY OF CELLINI

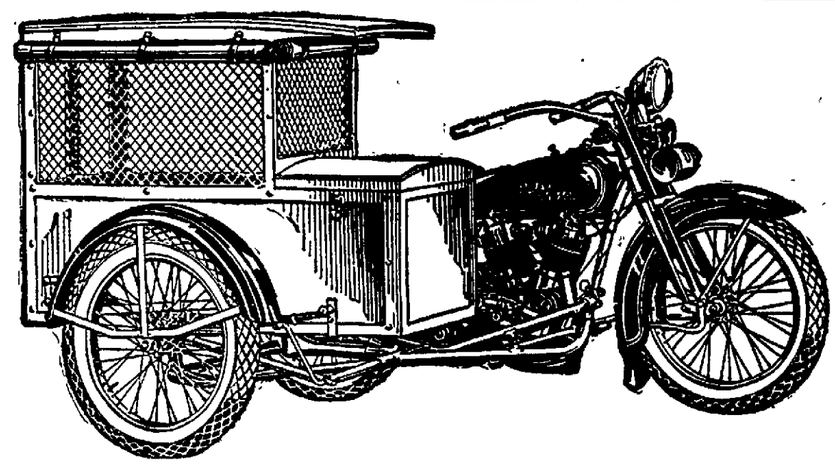

His Name Is Given to Designing on Reo's Beautiful "Flying Cloud"

If Benvenuto Cellini, most famous jeweler of all history, were alive today he might appropriately be employed in creating hardware for the modern automobile. For artists such as were formerly found only in exclusive shops, where the finest silverware and jewelry are made, are now designing motor car fittings.

This, in brief, is the reason given by Reo Motor Car Company officials for the name "Cellini" which designates the beautiful pattern of Flying Cloud hardware. Cellini, it is explained, has become the patron saint of jewelers, and his works are preserved as examples of fine design.

The famous Italian artist was born in Florence in 1500, and was apprenticed to a goldsmith at the age of fifteen. Cellini's first attempt at his craft was a silver casket, followed by some silver candlesticks. His wonderful work attracted the attention of the government, and he rapidly rose to fame and influence. When he died, he was buried with magnificent pomp, and his whole nation paid him homage. In addition to a bronze statue and a number of medallions, Cellini's works of art in existence today include the celebrated salt-cellar made for Francis I at Vienna—a masterpiece of craftsmanship.

ERSKINE 6 CREATES SENSATION ABROAD

Trades Papers in British Isles Devote Much Space to New Auto

Evidence of the interest the Erskine Six has created in foreign motor circles may be found in articles recently printed in automotive trade papers in the British Isles.

Asserting that when an American sets out to do things, he usually makes a neat job of it, The Irish Motor Trader of May 5, gives considerable space and much favorable comment to the Erskine Six.

"It comes as an ideal mean between the European quality car and the American value for the money proposition," said this magazine in referring to the Erskine Six. "The product of the famous designer, Dietrich, this saloon (sedan term in British Isles) is the essence of grace and elegance. One's first impressions suggest a product where first cost has been disregarded. Closer inspection fails to reveal how such a specification can be allied to a selling price of 335 pounds sterling, actually in Dublin. An expert would have every excuse for placing this vehicle in the 500-600 pounds sterling class.

"Your true technician will be as highly delighted with the road performances of this car as my lady will be charmed with its distinction.

TWO POWER UNITS

"Once out on the open road, it becomes apparent that the driver really has two power units in this six-cylinder engine. In strong contrast to many American products this unit is notably free from all trace of vibration period. It is just as silent and well-balanced at '48' as it is at '28' m.p.h. At '40' it is running at its best. Floating would most adequately describe the motion."

Further complimentary comments were printed in The Motor of May 3, a magazine well known throughout Great Britain.

"The Erskine Six is in all probability the forerunner of similar cars to follow its lines, for there is a tendency in the United States to build smaller vehicles, not only to make them suitable for European requirements, but to make their handling in the congested areas of their country easier," said The Motor.

"The car is low in overall height, yet a good ground clearance. And a few minutes with it brought out the fact that it is a particularly easy and comfortable car to drive."

NEED OF HOLD DOWN ON BATTERIES EXPLAINED

A hold-down is something few motorists know they have on their cars. Hold-downs are the little metal contraptions that bolt the battery secure in its cradle so that it can not rattle around whenever the car jolts or vibrates.

"Car builders," says Al Schroeder of the local Willard service station, "would not think of neglecting to put on battery hold-downs. These may become loose due to jarring of the car or to wear, but should be at all times kept tight. It is absolute neglect on the part of the owner to drive his car without hold-downs as he bumps the life out of his battery needlessly. If the battery is jumping around in the compartment it is not only liable to break the plates, but it wears out the separators, pulls the posts loose, is liable to break jars and the result is a prematurely worn out battery.

"A lot of electrical troubles in a car can be traced to the fact that hold-downs have become loose. It is part of the Willard 5-point Inspection Service to tighten the hold-downs of any battery and see that they are on in the proper manner."

FALCON-KNIGHT HAS HIGH PRICED MOTOR

Engine Has All Features of Finest European Model Automobiles

Specifications of the new Falcon-Knight in general, incorporate the features of this type of engine, which have been conspicuous in other Knight-motored productions in this country and Europe.

The construction of the sliding sleeves which take the place of the valves and valve mechanism of the poppet-valve type of motor, in conventional Knight design and mechanical fits and material specifications are identical with those of Knight motors found in other cars of higher price ranges.

The power department indicates that the engineers have paid especial attention to the present-day demand for great flexibility with quick getaway ability in traffic and with sustained pulling power on heavy grades.

Following the general tendency among quality built motors, the crankshaft in the motor is suspended in seven bearings, all of generous dimensions. Cooling is thermostatically controlled and other items of equipment and design follow equally advanced design.

Advancements in the construction of the Knight sleeve-valve motor during the past two years have been rapid both here and in Europe and many records have been established by these power plants for speed, power, economy and long life.

The position of this type of engine in this country has been increased in importance by the addition of an eight-cylindered motor by Stearns-Knight, by sales records of Willys-Knight models and now by the entry of a Knight-motored car in the Falcon-Knight in the lower price ranges.

In Europe, Daimler has presented a 12-cylindered Knight motor, which has been accepted as the outstanding mechanical development in European motor car engineering.

QUALITY OF TIRES GREATLY IMPROVED

Materials That Go into Tires Are Subjected to Closest Scrutiny

Akron, Ohio—Everything, in this period of automotive competition, has combined to work to the decided advantage of the motorist. Never before has the motorist's dollar received the unbounded respect that it receives today, in the purchase of anything related to the automotive industry. Automobile tires give the motorist, today, 27 times the value he received a few years ago. For that reason tires are being accepted on the same basis as other common commodities, according to the leading manufacturers.

However, it is pointed out that the greater value of tires is not so much the result of competition among manufacturers as it is the result of the demands of the modern automobile. Better tires have made better and lighter cars possible. As the tire industry advanced in quantity manufacturing it also progressed in quality manufacturing. Spending vast sums to constantly test tires and for research to develop methods of making still better tires have advanced that commodity to the same unquestionable position occupied by any other daily necessity.

Materials that go into tires are subjected to constant scrutiny. In the factory where Miller tires are made every inch of the thousands of yards of cord fabric, that are worked into tires each day, goes through a thorough inspection. Experts examine the uniflex fabric by a lighting arrangement that is designed to bring out the slightest defect in any cord. Slowly the huge rolls of fabric are unwound as the practiced inspectors search with unfailing light for the slightest defect that may have been caused in the spinning.

The care that applies to the cord fabric applies also to all other departments; inspections follow inspections; test follow tests and chemists apply their knowledge that tires may be made the best that men and machines can make them.

HUDSON-ESSEX HAS "BEST" HALF YEAR

Essex Plant Is Enlarged but Greater Output Still Too Small

Hudson-Essex closed on June 30 the biggest and most successful half year in its entire history, with between 165,000 and 170,000 six cylinder cars built and shipped to all parts of the world.

Despite this extremely large six cylinder volume, the company has been continuously behind the public demand for its cars, particularly the Essex, according to Hudson officials. The estimates are that the public would have bought 40,000 or 50,000 additional cars if they had been available.

It was in view of this demand for cars that the Essex plant was re-arranged and enlarged. At the same time the Essex cars themselves were made more powerful and attractive, and a plan of manufacturing laid out which is designed to effect prompt delivery to all buyers. From all important centers of the United States, the orders are pouring in for these new Essex Super-Sixes at a rate approximately twice that of a year ago.

"The feature of the year" said the Hudson-Essex distributor, is the great stride ahead made by Hudson-Essex. As soon as these cars were displayed at the New York Show last January, it was immediately apparent that a season of success was ahead. The Hudson-Essex show booth was the center of attraction. From the minute the show opened the public continuously demanded more Essex cars than could be manufactured.

"With such success, nine out of ten business concerns would have been more than satisfied, but the Hudson organization went ahead with its program of consistent improvement. Now these new Essex Super-Sixes are here, and are being greeted with an enthusiasms exceeding anything we have previously known.

"Essex is not a small or light car; it is a sturdy, roomy, rugged automobile, with 2400 pounds of weight; an abundance of horse-power; big strong axles, frames and other units. It is meant for hard, exacting service, and yet it has a velvety smoothness and driving ease that make it equally the car for the boulevard."

EXECUTIVE OF G. M. C. VISITS BIRTHPLACE

William Knudsen Stops at Copenhagen on Summer Trip Abroad

William S. Knudsen, president and general manager of the Chevrolet Motor company, is scheduled to return the second week in August from a combined business and pleasure trip to Europe, which included a visit to his former home at Copenhagen, Denmark the Chevrolet Motor company announced today.

Mr. Knudsen travels abroad took him to the Chevrolet assembly plants at Copenhagen, Antwerp and Berlin, which, like the American plants, are running at peak production. Mr. Knudsen noted that during the first six months of the year these three plants turned out more units than during the entire year of 1926, thus attesting to the overwhelming favor which the "Most Beautiful Chevrolet" is finding among European buyers.

In addition to inspecting these plants Mr. Knudsen traveled extensively in Germany, Denmark, Belgium, Holland and France.

His visit to Copenhagen revived memories and associations of his early life, for he was born and reared in this Denmark town. After being educated at the grammar and high school and the government technical school at Copenhagen, he apprenticed himself for a period of four years to gain a thorough knowledge of his trade. At the age of nineteen h eleft Denmark to make American his home.

Mr. Knudsen's advance here was rapid. In 1922 he became associated with the General Motors Corporation and shortly afterward was made vice-president in charge of operations of the Chevrolet Motor company. On Jan. 15, 1924, he was elected president and general manager of Chevrolet and a vice-president of General Motors.

Mr. Knudsen is expected back at the Chevrolet executive offices at Detroit, Mich., by the middle of August.

USE OF RECLAIMED RUBBER IS GROWING

Inferior Tires Sold by Supposedly Reputable Manufacturers

Continued decreases in imports of crude rubber this year, following a decrease in imports amounting to 72,500 tons last year, is evidence that substitutes for good rubber continue to be used in large quantities by American tire manufacturers, says a bulletin of The General Tire & Rubber Co. to the trade.

The Rubber Association has just announced that March importations of rubber totalled 35,078 tons as compared with 42,677 tons for the same month last year, and that imports for the first three months of 1927 were 108,000 tons, a decline of 6,802 from the same period of 1926. All figures in the Association's report represent long tons of 2200 pounds each.

Under the guise of conservation, many tire makers put great qualities of second-hand, or reclaimed rubber into their tires last year, the amount being represented approximately by the fact that the rubber imports in 1926 were 72,500 tons less than the year before, in the face of a growing business and demand for tires. The use of these substitutes accounted for the selling drives placed behind "secondary" or bargain lines of tire even by some manufacturers who had hitherto borne a good reputation for quality.

Although much of the public paid for a lesson in the difference between cheap and quality tires last year, it is evident that some manufacturers did not, as is reflected in the story of smaller rubber imports thus far in 1927, and reclaimers of rubber goods that have already lived one life of useful service are busier than ever. Their task is rendered more difficult by the fact that the rubber goods they now seek to reclaim now already contains reclaimed material. That is, rubber that has lived not only one life of work, but two, so the resultant product is of very doubtful usefulness indeed.

HEADLIGHT QUESTION IS SOLVED BY STATE

Four Point Test Is Approved by Industrial Commission of Wisconsin

Ralph W. Crary, member of the Society of Automotive Engineers makes the statement that Wisconsin has solved the tremendously important automobile headlight question. He says that Wisconsin is far and away ahead of all other states in taking the necessary steps to solve this problem and that it has:

1. A simple and suitable law regulating the lights of motor vehicles.
2. Suitable and easily understood standards for determining glare and driving light.
3. Automatic testing boards for measuring the light from headlamps.
4. Plans for the establishing of 259 automobile headlight testing stations, to cover the state, where testing service, adjusting service and replacement service can be had.

He further says that he is against the practice of dimming or tilting, which is forbidden by the laws of Wisconsin, and is opposed to any device which leaves the control of the lights in the hands of the driver. He also states that the four point test approved by the Industrial Commission of Wisconsin is the simplest and most practical method of judging the light from automobile headlamps, and that it not only has the approval of engineers, but could easily be understood by each and every motorist. He calls attention to the fact that in Massachusetts, an analysis of several hundred fatal accidents showed that insufficient illumination was the cause of three times as many accidents as was glare.

"Wisconsin has solved this question," said Mr. Crary, "and recommends that the Society of Automotive Engineers and the automobile manufacturers do nothing further on this problem other than to study the results which will be obtained in Wisconsin during 1926. Wisconsin has become an automobile headlight testing laboratory where every condition of road and climate can be seen, not only in cross-section, but in toto. The cooperation of the enforcement officers is certain, now that the means for enforcing the law easily and inoffensively have been found, and the hearty cooperation of the motorist is expected.

J. M. CRAWFORD IS NAMED ENGINEER BY CHEVROLET

O. E. Hunt, vice-president in charge of engineering of the Chevrolet Motor Company, has announced the appointment of J. M. Crawford, for 21 years an automotive engineer, to the newly created position of assistant chief engineer of the Chevrolet Motor Company. Mr. Crawford assumed his new duties the latter part of July.

Prior to joining the Chevrolet organization, Mr. Crawford was for six years chief engineer for a well-known builder of medium-priced cars. His new position with Chevrolet, the largest manufacturer of gear shift cars in the world, is regarded in automotive circles as a distinct and well-merited promotion growing out of his extensive, practical knowledge of motor car building.

He entered this field in 1905 and has literally grown up with the industry, serving with various automobile manufacturers, chief of which was the old Chalmers Motor Company, from that date to the present time.

NEW SALES RECORDS EXPECTED BY NASH

All Previous July Marks Broken by Tremendous Volume of Business

Official records of The Nash Motors company show that last month sales and production were 71 per cent greater than any July in the history of the company. The production for the month was 14,956 cars.

"August sales and production will surpass July by a wide margin," said E. H. McCarty, general sales manager of the company. "Based on orders now in hand August not only will be the biggest August we have ever had but it will eclipse all previous sales and production records and will go down as the biggest single month in the history of the company."

The seven-bearing crankshaft motors with which all cars in the three Nash series are equipped, the new easy riding Nash springs of a secret process alloy steel, the handsome appearance of the twenty-one models in the new Nash line, the lower bodies, the handsome new radiators, and the countless details of refinement and improvement, have literally swept the country in public favor since the introduction of the new line June 28. The record-breaking July sales and the forthcoming record-breaking August sales are the public's indorsement of the "finest cars ever built by C. W. Nash."

As a result, the combined daily production at all three of the company's plants, Kenosha, Racine and Milwaukee is greater than at any time since the first car bearing the Nash nameplate was shipped from the factory.

Net profits and car sales for the Auburn Automobile Company, for the first six months of this year practically equal the entire production of 1926, according to an announcement of President E. L. Cord at a recent stockholders meeting.

The company reports a net income of $865,869 for the six months ending May 31. After taxes and other charges are accounted for this sum shows a net share of $9.39 on the 92,171 shares outstanding. One year ago the company showed a net of $560,848 for the six months period and a net of $8.30 per share on 67,572 shares outstanding.

The balance sheet of May 31, 1927, shows total assets, as of May 31, 1927, of $7,691,927, current assets of $6,369,952, current liabilities of $1,328,078 and a profit and loss surplus of $2,956,199.

Mr. Cord says: "We expect to increase the capitalization of the company from 120,000 shares to 500,000, to expedite the handling of corporate affairs. While the old shares had a par value of $25 the new shares will have no par value.

'Our sales department anticipates a very substantial increase for the last six months of the year, based on past dealer and consumer acceptance. In order to keep pace with this increased demand we are equipping our Connersville, Ind., plant which wil add materialy to production facilities after January 1.

"With Auburn's greatest period of growth ahead we will continue to put back into the business a cosiderable portion of the earnings of the company, as we have for the past three years."

BUSINESS IN EUROPE IS GENERALLY GOOD

Northern Countries Especially Are Again Heading Toward Prosperity

Business in Europe is generally good and prospects for the future are bright, according to Donald T. Stanton, manager of export sales for Dodge Brothers, Inc. Mr. Stanton has just returned from a two month trip on which he visited Dodge Brothers Dealers in over 25 leading cities in eight European countries and his comments on conditions are of particular interest.

"Evidences of returning prosperity are to be seen in practically every country visited," Mr. Stanton says. "Particularly is this true in the North European countries, Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Holland. Germany too seems to be making rapid progress and everywhere factories which have been practically closed since the War are now starting to operate again.

"American built automobiles are gaining in popularity ever, year and Europe seems destined to take a constantly increasing proportion of the output of our factories. Dodge Brothers business in Europe has been very good this year and when the new line of lower priced fours now being introduced in the United States is put on the market abroad I look for a very considerable increase in our sales there."

Mr. Stanton states that Dodge Brothers' European Dealers are particularly enthusiastic about Dodge Brothers six cylinder line. The Dealer at Stockholm received his first six while Mr. Stanton was visiting him and after trying it out he cabled an order for 50 additional cars to be shipped immediately.
